New park regulations far-reaching

■ Board would oversee events

Henderson Fiscal Court's new parks ordinance does much more than regulate just parks — it also sets up a permit process for large public events on private land such as Ski Day. For the past month or so the court has been tinkering with an ordinance that sets up a park board, and passed first reading of it Tuesday, but during the same period Henderson County Sheriff Ed Brady has been asking for some type of greater control over Ski Day, which is held annually at Scuffletown beach. The event began with little planning in 1979 when Rick O'Daniel of Evansville and a friend who owned Pine Mountain Outfitters moored a boat at the Evansville riverfront and had a drawing for a pair of skis.

It's since become one of the most popular boating days of the year for the Tri-state area. The event's website touts it as "spring break and Mardi Gras in a blender." Traditionally, it has featured a bikini contest, but since 2006 it has also catered to the libidos of women by hosting a "King of the Beach" competition.

The sheriff told fiscal court on Tuesday that this past Ski Day on Aug. 12 there were about 1,800 people in attendance, and he said there were "hundreds of underage drinkers."

And while the vast majority of those who attend are simply having a good time and causing no problems, Brady said, a minority are engaging in "wide-

Planning board OKs
flooding ordinances

By Frank Boyett

New flood damage prevention ordinances for city and county governments were unanimously recommended for approval Tuesday by the Henderson City-County Planning Commission.

The only citizen to speak during the public hearing on the ordinances, which are virtually identical, was former District Judge Harvey Ershig.

"Is this going to restrict any private property from being developed?" he asked.

Not really, replied Tom Williams, director of engineering for the Henderson Water Utility, who has been the point man on the ordinances. The only place where construction is outright prohibited, he explained, are essentially in stream channels. "You can't build anything in a flood way."

"This is reverse condemnation," Ershig said. "What I'm concerned about is somebody not being able to use their property."

"They can't build a house in a creek," Williams replied. "You can still farm it, you can still log it; you just can't build a structure like a barn or a house."

Williams explained that the ordinances mostly affect construction in special flood hazard areas, which are low-lying areas where flooding is a distinct possibility. Property in special flood hazard areas can be developed, he explained, but the buildings must meet higher standards. "It doesn't put a blanket restriction on it."

More than 400 people in the county currently have flood insurance, Williams said, and if homeowners have a mortgage backed by the federal government they will probably be re-

Southeast ready for fall color burst

By Randall Dickerson
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — As days get shorter and nights become chillier, the annual fall foliage show is getting under way in the Southeast.

The first colors are beginning to show in the higher elevations of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, which is a popular draw for tourists in October.

Expect a good show, said Janet

Rock, a botanist in the Smokies.

"As long as we stay on track with the weather we've had, it should be a good year," said Rock.

The shorter span of sunlight each day is the main trigger, but Rock said temperatures and precipitation also affect the show.

"When you have warm sunny days and nights that don't reach freezing, it brings out the best colors, Rock said.

The mountains weren't badly affected by drought conditions that burned crops to the west.

Leaves change color because they're shutting down photosynthesis, which makes food for the trees. The production of green chlorophyll masks other colors. However, red pigment production also ramps up as photosynthesis shuts down.

The fall fire season began Monday, and the Kentucky Division of Forestry said they are preparing for an active wildfire season.

During the fall fire season, which runs until Dec. 15, outdoor burning is illegal between the hours of 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. within 150 feet of any woodland or brushland.

Although the area has been receiving its share of needed rain, officials said a large portion of the Commonwealth is still dry.

Kentucky Division of Forestry Director Leah MacSworbs said this summer's drought, coupled with spring tornadoes "left many of our woodlands damaged. The accumulation of storm-damaged trees and limbs not only create additional fuel for wildland fire, it increases

Fiscal court takes bids on park project

■ New speed limit set for Stratman; revised recycling agreement approved

By Frank Boyett
fboyett@thegleaner.com
270-831-8342

Three bids were submitted Tuesday for repairing the rock and brick wall around the courtyard in front of the museum at Audubon State Park.

“At least we got some bids this time,” Judge-executive Hugh McCormick said. Henderson Fiscal Court took the bids under advisement so they can be studied by County Engineer Bill Hubiak and Park Director Mark Kellen. No one submitted a bid after the project was first advertised. The apparent low bidder was J.M. Johnson Construction Inc. of Evansville at $64,873. N.M. Bunge Inc. of Evansville bid $76,985, while Arc Construction Inc. of Evansville bid $187,900.

Fiscal court has $350,000 in coal severance tax funds to pay for the project, as well as to help build a new theater planned for the museum.

Other items before fiscal court on Tuesday included:

Stratman Road: The court passed a resolution setting a temporary 45 mph speed limit on Stratman Road during construction there. Once the work is done, Hubiak said, a traffic study will be done to determine what the permanent speed limit should be. Hubiak also noted that people have been moving traffic barriers there and driving through the construction zone. “We will be monitoring that,” he said. “It is a serious offense.”

Wood chipper: McCormick recommended selling the chipper in the county’s surplus property auction and go out to bids for buying a new one that will be more dependable in disposing of the brush pile at the county garage.

Recycling agreement: The court approved a revised interlocal agreement for the Tri-County Recycling Alliance. The version recently approved by the court (as well as by the city of Henderson and the fiscal courts in Union and Webster counties) was not accepted by the state Department of Local Government, which required minor revisions.

Health district: Debbie Fillman of the Green River Health Department gave the court a quarterly update on her agency’s activities. She noted nearly $1.4 million in prescription drugs were donated over the past year, and donated health care treated 128 people who received about $17,280 worth of free care.

Judge’s Scholar: The student honored Tuesday was Cadence McAtee, a fourth-grader at South Heights Elementary School.

Coal permit: The court granted a request from Patriot Coal Co. to renew a mine permit for an existing coal haul road.

Providence man facing charges of molestation

Scripps Newspapers

BOONVILLE, Ind. — A Western Kentucky man was arrested on charges of child molestation and incest.

According to a Warrick County Sheriff’s Office news release, Jeremy Dorris Jones, 34, of Providence was arrested Sept. 27 by the United States Marshal’s Task Force and the Providence Police Department on a Posey County warrant.

Jones is accused of molesting a female in both Warrick and Posey counties between 1994 and 2001.

Prosecuting attorneys in both counties received the case after a month-long investigation. Jones was charged in Posey Superior Court on Sept. 27 with one county of child molesting, a Class A felony, and one count of incest, a Class B felony.

Additional charges of child molesting as a Class B felony and Class C felony along with incest as a Class B felony were filed in Warrick Circuit Court on Sept. 28.

Jones is being held in Webster County jail, awaiting an extradition hearing.

LST runs aground in Lake Barkley

By John Martin
martinj@courierpress.com
812-464-7594

The LST 325 ran aground Monday in Lake Barkley near Kuttawa, Ky., while returning from a journey to two Tennessee cities.

U.S. Coast Guard authorities were assisting crew members on Tuesday to release the vessel so it could come back to Evansville.

“They are in the process of freeing it with tugboats,” said Chris Donahue, an LST board member. “The ship is 1,700 tons and as long as a football field. So it takes a little work.”

Robert Jornlin, captain of the LST, was busy when reached on his cellphone

Tuesday. “We’re attempting to get out of here, so I can’t talk to you,” Jornlin said.

The LST has been away for more than two weeks on visits to Nashville and Clarksville, Tenn. Donahue said the vessel drew about 14,000 visitors at each location.

Donahue said the channel where the LST ran aground is smaller than the Ohio River, so there’s “less room for error” for river pilots steering the ship.

Given the misty, rainy weather, pilots also might have had visibility problems, Donahue said.

Had the LST’s journey remained on schedule, it would have returned to Evansville Monday or Tuesday.

East Heights Family Night is Thursday

East Heights Elementary School will hold a Family Night at Cates Farm Corn Maze on Thursday from 5 to 7 p.m.

Families will enjoy a night out with a hayride, corn hole games, pumpkin picking from the pumpkin patch and pumpkin painting fun.

They will also have a chance to be involved in an interactive corn maze, to ride paddle tractors, to pose for family photos and to sit by a camp fire to roast marshmallows.

East Heights Elementary Family Resource Center and Title I will provide hot dogs, chips and drinks for everyone.

The cost is $5 per person (age 3 and under free), and payment will be expected at the gate.

For more information, contact Melissa Walker, East Heights Elementary Family Resource Coordinator III, at 831-5070.

South science teacher picked for academy

A science teacher at South Middle School has been selected to participate in the 2012-2013 New Science Teacher Academy as a Dow Chemical Company — National Science Teachers Association Fellow.

Hallie Muncy was selected to participate in the academy through an application process at the beginning of this school year.

She transferred to South Middle School from B. McDaniel Middle School in

Hallie Muncy

Denison, Texas.

The purpose of the academy is to help promote quality science teaching, enhance teacher confidence and classroom excellence, and improve teacher content knowledge.

Muncy will attend the National Science Teachers Association Conference in San Antonio, Texas, from April 9-13 as well as a pre-conference for the Professional Development Institute on April 10.

In order to graduate from the academy, fellows must complete at least two New Teacher Center’s e-Mentoring for Student Success (eMMS) Explorations, and they must be fully engaged with the prescribed New Science Teacher Academy Curriculum, which includes web seminars, online posting and interaction with a mentor.

“I hope to gain a more thorough knowledge of the content and science standards for the middle grades,” Muncy said. “I look forward to bringing back exciting new ideas to South Middle School that can improve instructional methods and student learning.”

Christmas concert Dec. 8 at HFAC

Open your holiday season with the Habitat for Humanity of Henderson “Magic of Christmas” at the Henderson Fine Arts Center on Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m.

The performance will include music performed by the Owensboro Symphony Orchestra.

The cost is $15 for adults and $5 for kids age 6 and over. Children under age 6 enter for free.

Tickets may be purchased at Henderson Habitat for Humanity or the Henderson Fine Arts Center box office. All proceeds benefit Habitat for Humanity of Henderson.

Rover Curiosity finds potential Mars base site

If there were such an entity as a Martian real estate agent, the cap would be off the smiling agent's pen and the sales contract slid confidently in front of John Grotzinger for an immediate closing.

Grotzinger is the top scientist on the Mars Science Laboratory, which has operated the lunar rover and explorer Curiosity since it landed in August. A key goal of that mission was to find a site for a possible Mars base, and NASA's scientists announced last week that it had located a “habitable” site.

The site, an ancient streambed, offers nearly conclusive proof that there was flowing water on Mars — in the form of rounded pebbles that were smoothed by being washed 20 to 25 miles down a stream of fast-flowing water that might have been waist deep.

Confirmation of water flows was a key goal of the mission. As for finding a site for a possible future base, Curiosity located what in wetter times might have been a gravel bar in a river.

Cynics will say trust the government to set up shop in a flood plain, but the last water flow may have been “several billions years ago,” according to one scientist. Nevertheless, these areas that once held water are the best places to search for organic compounds, especially carbon-based ones that could indicate the presence of life at one time.

Curiosity's success is a welcome antidote to those who have lost faith in the U.S.'s ability to pull off truly marvelous technical feats.

The rover is in what is called the Gale Crater, and its next destination is a mountain in the center of the crater.

The discoveries in the riverbed may have already answered questions the scientists hoped to resolve.

But as that Martian agent might have explained, real estate is a never-ending quest for location, location, location.

Real refs are back; now let's move on

From The Edwardsville, Ill., Intelligencer:

All was right in the world again Sunday. The National Football League and its referees were together again.

Who would have thought the nation — quite possibly the world — would be so elated to see those two parties come to a labor agreement, ending a lockout that stretched back to June ...

But, hey, America loves its football.

In fact, both President Barack Obama and challenger Mitt Romney chimed in on the whole affair before NFL owners and the officials' union came to terms late last Wednesday.

“NFL fans on both sides of the aisle hope the refs' lockout is settled soon,” Obama tweeted.

“I'd sure like to see some experienced referees with NFL experience come back,” Romney said.

What we say is this — it's never a good sign when politicians get involved in sports.

We know Obama was an athlete when he was younger and still enjoys playing basketball. Romney, as we hear, was a cross country runner in high school.

But beyond that, they have nothing in common with the beer-drinking, jersey-wearing, hard-hatted football fans who gather in stadiums or around televisions every Sunday and scream their lungs out for their teams.

Talking about football makes politicians seem more regular — so does rolling up their shirt sleeves to give the impression of a working man.

We know better. We also know that the NFL has its referees back. The replacements are gone, leaving behind dozens of bad calls and dozens of equally bad jokes.

We can all return to our normal lives.

And, hopefully, the politicians can return to their campaigns — and talk about something more meaningful than football.

Montreal Mary and the Mennonites put every other cup of Joe to shame

I blame you, Montreal Mary. You're the one who made us care ... about our coffee. You — and the Mennonites.

I've been drinking coffee for about a half century. My earliest cups were the ones I drank with my grandfather on Saturday afternoons when, as a little kid, I went with Granddad to “work” at the laundry and dry cleaning plant he owned.

Granddad would swing by our house at about noon on Saturday, have a cup of — what else? — coffee with Mom while I waited in our den, watching Ira Massie of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture on “Tobacco Talk,” a TV show for burley growers, because the morning cartoons were over. Then Granddad and I went to the plant, where I would wander around chatting with the Saturday afternoon skeleton crew or would lounge on bundles of dirty laundry that customers had dropped off.

At about 3 p.m., Granddad would summon me and we would go upstairs to the office staff's break room. He would pour coffee into a pair of short, thick-walled porcelain coffee mugs of the sort you would see at roadside diners. I would pull a couple of cubes out of the yellow and blue Domino sugar box and stir in some powdered creamer, then blow on the sweet concoction until it was cool enough for me to sip.

And so, Granddad and I would discuss the progress we had thus far made on the day's work.

This led to daily coffee at breakfast at home. I was the youngest coffee drinker I knew.

I've been drinking coffee ever since. Although we were mostly a Maxwell House (“Good to the Last Drop”) household, I wasn't particularly picky about brands — so long as it wasn't Folgers. In later years, Folgers had an appealing jingle that concluded, “The best part of wakin' up is Folgers in the cup.” But I found the taste of Folgers to be revolting.

CHUCK STINETT

(The researchers at Consumers Report magazine agree; they rank Folgers House Blend as the worst “good” coffee, and two other Folgers blends as the worst “fair” coffees. Put another way, Starbucks House Blend topped the charts with a score of 57; Folgers Classic Roast Medium bottomed out with a score of 28.)

As the decades rolled by, I puttered around with several brands of coffee (although there was a time when there weren't that many to choose from). After I married, we toyed with what I considered some relatively obscure old brands — coffees such as Chase & Sanborn, Hills Bros. and Eight O'Clock — and rather enjoyed them.

But aside from a cup being brewed too weak, a cup of coffee was a cup of coffee.

Or so I thought.

Donna and I went to visit Mary and Dick three years ago while they were living in Montreal on Mount Royal, the hill that gave the city its name.

That first morning, I padded out of the guest bedroom and heard Mary humming happily in the kitchen.

“Coffee?” she said.

Yes, of course.

I take my coffee black, no sugar, these days. I blew on the coffee awhile. I inhaled the rich aroma of the dark brew. It smelled wonderful and tasted even better. I'm not a coffee authority; I can't tell you whether the coffee was earthy or green or woody or grainy. I can tell you that this coffee was a whole new animal compared with the sawdust I had been drinking all my life.

“What is this?” I asked.

That's when the Mennonites entered the picture.

In my ignorance, I thought of Mennonite Christians as being a rather distant people who purposefully isolated themselves from the broader world — and perhaps some of them are.

But Mennonites are far more engaged in the world than I imagined; they are a people who believe in peacemaking, social compassion and mutual aid.

For example, the Mennonite Disaster Service is one of the most active and swift group of responders. Volunteers from more than 3,000 Mennonite, Amish and Brethren in Christ churches rush to help victims of hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, earthquakes and other natural catastrophes. Presently, there are Mennonites laboring in the wake of flooding by Hurricane Isaac in Louisiana; in Saskatchewan, Mennonites have launched a hay drive to help farmers in drought-stricken areas of Eastern Ontario and the U.S. Midwest.

They are similarly concerned about the chronically impoverished people of the Third World. During a trip with her husband in Puerto Rico back in 1946, Edna Ruth Byler felt compassion for the poor women of the island; to aid them, she agreed to market their needlework back home. Later, crafts from other parts of the world were added, resulting in the creation of the Mennonite Central Committee Self Help Crafts program.

This would grow into Ten Thousand Villages, a Mennonite-operated chain of some 150 stores that market crafts and other products from poor villagers who can't sell their goods locally at a reasonable price. As Mary's husband, Dick (who at the time served on the board of a Ten Thousand Villages store where Mary volunteered) explained it, the Mennonites realized that it wasn't enough to hurry to the aid of poor victims of a natural disaster; they needed a path to prosperity, whereby they could sell their life's work at as close to a developed world retail price as possible. It's part of what has grown into the Fair Trade movement — helping to ensure that people who create worthwhile products can earn a more dignified living instead of being exploited.

As it happens, one of the biggest crops raised by villagers across the southern hemisphere — in South America, Africa, the Pacific islands and elsewhere — is coffee beans.

Among the many things I don't know about Mennonites is whether they drink coffee. But I can attest that the Ten Thousand Villages coffee that Mary brewed in that little kitchen in Montreal — I think it was a Columbian dark-roasted bean — put to utter shame every previous cup of coffee I had ever sipped. I was hooked.

We brought some packages back with us, and later found a Ten Thousand Villages store in Nashville. But then that store stopped selling that brand of Fair Trade coffee. What has followed has been a series of crushing disappointments in which we either drank Fair Trade-labeled Joe that failed to live up to that memorable cup up in Quebec, or found an acceptable substitute, only to have the retailer discontinue it.

I will tell you that we currently are drinking a very satisfactory Fair Trade coffee and have several packages in the fridge. But don't ask me what it's called or where it comes from. It's ours — all ours.

NYPD watching Facebook to nab gangs

By Tom Hays
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Police investigating two gangs called the Very Cripsy Gangsters and the Rockstarz didn't need to spend all their time pounding the pavement for leads. Instead, they fired up their computers and followed the trash talk on Facebook.

"Rockstarz up 3-0," one suspect boasted — a reference to the body count from a bloody turf war between the Brooklyn gangs that ultimately resulted in 49 arrests last month.

Authorities in New York say a new generation of gang members is increasingly using social media to boast of their exploits and issue taunts and challenges that result in violence. And police and prosecutors have responded over the past several years by closely monitoring Facebook and other sites for leads and evidence.

On Tuesday, New York Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly announced plans to beef up the NYPD's cyber crackdown by expanding the use of aggressive online investigative tactics and doubling the size of the department's gang unit to 300 investigators.

The reinforcements will focus less on established gangs like the Bloods and Crips and more on loosely-knit groups of teenagers who stake out a certain block or section of a housing project as their turf and exact vengeance on those who trespass or fail to show the proper respect.

Intelligence effort names citizens but not terrorists

By Matt Apuzzo
and Eileen Sullivan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A multibillion-dollar information-sharing program created in the aftermath of 9/11 has improperly collected information about innocent Americans and produced little valuable intelligence on terrorism, a U.S. Senate report concludes. It portrays an effort that ballooned far beyond anyone's ability to control.

What began as an attempt to put local, state and federal officials in the same room analyzing the same intelligence has instead cost huge amounts of money for data-mining software and flat screen televisions, investigators found.

The lengthy, bipartisan report is a scathing evaluation of what the Department of Homeland Security has held up as a crown jewel of its security efforts. The report underscores a reality of post-9/11 Washington: National security programs tend to grow, never shrink, even when their money and manpower far surpass the actual subject of terrorism. Much of this money went for ordinary local crime-fighting.

Because of a convoluted grants process set up by Congress, Homeland Security officials don't know how much they have spent in their decade-long effort to set up so-called fusion centers in every state.

Government estimates range from less than $300 million to $1.4 billion in federal money, plus much more invested by state and local governments.

A Senate Homeland Security subcommittee reviewed more than 600 unclassified reports over a one-year period and concluded that most had nothing to do with terrorism. The panel's chairman is Democrat Carl Levin of Michigan, the ranking Republican Tom Coburn of Oklahoma.

"The subcommittee investigation could identify no reporting which uncovered a terrorist threat, nor could it identify a contribution such fusion center reporting made to disrupt an active terrorist plot," the report said.

The centers have made headlines for circulating information about Ron Paul supporters, the ACLU, activists on both sides of the abortion debate, war protesters and advocates of gun rights.

The federal government is prohibited from storing information about First Amendment activities not related to crimes.

U.S. links Mexican police, gangsters

MEXICO CITY — A senior U.S. official says there is strong circumstantial evidence that Mexican federal police who fired on a U.S. Embassy vehicle, wounding two CIA officers, were working for organized crime on a targeted assassination attempt.

Meanwhile, a Mexican official with knowledge of the case on the Aug. 24 ambush confirmed on Tuesday that prosecutors are investigating whether the Beltran Leyva Cartel was behind the attack.

The Mexican official said that is among several lines of investigation into the shooting up of an armored SUV that was clearly marked with diplomatic license plates on a rural road near Cuernavaca south of Mexico City. Federal police, at times battered by allegations of infiltration and corruption by drug cartels, have said the shooting was a case of mistaken identity as officers were looking into the kidnapping of a government employee in that area.

Photos of the gray Toyota SUV, a model known to be used by Drug Enforcement Administration agents and other U.S. Embassy employees working in Mexico, showed it riddled with heavy gunfire. The U.S. Embassy called the attack an "ambush."

Border agent shot, killed on patrol

NACO — A Border Patrol agent was shot to death Tuesday in Arizona near the U.S.-Mexico line, the first fatal shooting of an agent since a deadly 2010 firefight with Mexican bandits that spawned congressional probes of a botched government gunsmuggling investigation.

The agent, Nicholas Ivie, 30, and a colleague were on patrol in the desert near Naco when shooting broke out shortly before 2 a.m., the Border Patrol said. The second agent was shot in the ankle and buttocks, and was reported to be in stable condition Tuesday afternoon.

No arrests have been made, but authorities suspect that more than one person fired at the agents.

Judge halts voter ID requirement

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania's divisive voter identification requirement became the latest of its kind to get pushback from the courts ahead of Election Day, delivering a hard-fought victory to Democrats who said it was a ploy to defeat President Barack Obama and other opponents who said it would prevent the elderly and minorities from voting.

Commonwealth Court Judge Robert Simpson said in his ruling that he was concerned by the state's stumbling efforts to create a photo ID that is easily accessible to voters and that he could not rely on the assurances of government officials at this late date that every voter would be able to get a valid ID.

If it stands, it is good news for Obama's chances in Pennsylvania, one of the nation's biggest Electoral College prizes, unless Republicans and the Tea Party groups that backed the law find a way to use it to motivate their supporters and possibly independents.

Group calls for end to 'legacy' of abuse

CAIRO — Amnesty International on Tuesday took Egypt's new president to task for failing to address the "bloody legacy" of abuses committed by security forces under military rule after the fall of Hosni Mubarak, abuses that continue even after the establishment of the country's first freely elected government.

The group urged President Mohammed Morsi to hold the military accountable for the killing, torture and sexual abuse of protesters during the 18 months when the generals held power after Mubarak's February 2011 ouster.

It also said Morsi should rein in police forces, which it said still use excessive force to deal with protests and have tortured detainees. It called for the government to allow U.N. experts to investigate and assess how to deal with the problems.

TEHRAN — Iran's president on Tuesday blamed the steep drop in Iran's currency on "psychological pressures" linked to Western sanctions over Tehran's nuclear program and Iran's increasing bitter political battles.

The remarks were part of Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's attempt to deflect criticism from political rivals that his government's policies also have contributed to the nose-dive of the Iranian rial, which has lost more than half its value against the U.S. dollar this year and has pushed up costs sharply for many imported goods.

Hezbollah commander, several fighters die in Syria

By Elizabeth A. Kennedy
Associated Press

BEIRUT — A Hezbollah commander and several fighters have been killed inside Syria, a Lebanese security official said Tuesday, a development that could stoke already soaring tensions over the Lebanese militant group's role in the civil war next door.

Hezbollah's reputation has taken a beating over its support for the Syrian regime, but any sign that the group's fighters are taking part in the battle raises fears that the conflict could expand into a wider fight engulfing the region.

Hezbollah has stood by Syrian President Bashar Assad since the uprising began 18 months ago, even after the group supported revolts in Egypt, Tunisia, Libya and Bahrain.

Assad's fall would be a dire scenario for Hezbollah. Any new regime led by Syria's majority Sunni Muslims would likely be far less friendly — or even outright hostile — to Shiite Muslim Hezbollah. Iran remains the group's most important patron, but Syria is a crucial supply route. Without it, Hezbollah will struggle to get money and weapons as easily.

The Syrian uprising has left Assad deeply isolated — making his remaining allies such as Iran and Russia all the more important. At last week's gathering of world leaders at the United Nations, dozens of nations excoriated the Assad regime for its role in a conflict that activists estimate has killed at least 30,000 Syrians.

It was not immediately clear how the Hezbollah militants were killed or whether they had been fighting alongside the Syrian army. But Hezbollah's newspaper al-Intiqad said Hezbollah commander Ali Hussein Nassif, who is also known as Abu Abbas, was killed "while performing his jihadi duties." It did not say when or where he was killed.

A Lebanese security official said Nassif was killed in Syria and his body was returned to Lebanon through the Masnaa border crossing on Sunday. Speaking on condition of anonymity because he is not authorized to speak to the media, the official said the bodies of several other Hezbollah fighters have been brought back to Lebanon in recent days.

Hezbollah spokesman Ibrahim Moussawi on Tuesday confirmed the deaths of the Hezbollah members.

Syrian war unresolved during U.N. assembly

By Ron DePasquale
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — After countless speeches, meetings and behind-the-scenes discussions, the war in Syria remained the unsolved problem that loomed over this year's gathering of world leaders at the United Nations.

As the weeklong meeting of the U.N. General Assembly ended Monday, there were no breakthroughs on a civil war that has vexed diplomats, paralyzed the Security Council and raised new questions about the relevance of the United Nations.

Anyone willing to look closely, however, might spot a few signs of movement. The new international envoy to Syria, Lakhdar Brahimi, said he saw an "opening" for a solution and was working on a new approach after visiting Syria. The Emir of Qatar and other leaders in the region called for some kind of Arab-led intervention. But details were hard to come by.

The lack of progress on Syria has undermined the U.N.'s credibility, Deputy Secretary-General Jan Eliasson said in a news conference Tuesday.

"I recognize that we here in the United Nations have to prove that we can present international solutions that work — that's the big issue," he said. "And of course I will admit openly that the fact that the Syria tragedy goes on day after day is very damaging for the standing of the United Nations."

While there was no solution, talk about Syria was heard everywhere.

Supersonic skydiver aims to break sound barrier in jump

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — His blood could boil. His lungs could overinflate. The vessels in his brain could burst. His eyes could hemorrhage.

And, yes, he could break his neck while jumping from a mind-boggling altitude of 23 miles.

But the risk of a gruesome death has never stopped “Fearless Felix” Baumgartner in all his years of skydiving and skyscraper leaping, and it’s not about to now.

Monday over New Mexico, he will attempt the highest, fastest free fall in history and try to become the first skydiver to break the sound barrier.

“So many unknowns,” Baumgartner says, “but we have solutions to survive.”

The 43-year-old former military parachutist from Austria is hoping to reach 690 mph, or Mach 1, after leaping from his balloon-hoisted capsule over the desert near Roswell.

He will have only a pressurized suit and helmet for protection as he tries to go supersonic 65 years after Chuck Yeager, flying an experimental rocket plane, became the first human to go faster than the speed of sound.

Doctors, engineers and others on Baumgartner’s Red Bull-sponsored team have spent as much as five years studying the risks and believe they have done everything possible to bring him back alive. He has tested out his suit and capsule in two dress rehearsals, jumping from 15 miles in March and 18 miles in July.

Baumgartner will be more than three times higher than the cruising altitude of jetliners when he hops, bunny-style, out of the capsule and into a near-vacuum where there is barely any oxygen and less than 1 percent of the air pressure on Earth.

If all goes well, he will reach the speed of sound in about half a minute at an altitude of around 100,000 feet. Then he will start to slow as the atmosphere gets denser, and after five minutes of free fall, he will pull his main parachute. The entire descent should last 15 to 20 minutes.

He will be rigged with cameras that will provide a live broadcast of the jump via the Internet, meaning countless viewers could end up witnessing a horrific accident.

Baumgartner is insistent on going live with his flight.

“We want to share that with the world,” he says. “It’s like landing on the moon. Why was that live?”

His team of experts — including the current record-holder from a half-century ago, Joe Kittinger, now 84 — will convene inside a NASA-style Mission Control in the wee hours Monday for the liftoff of the helium balloon at sunrise.

“All the things that can happen are varying degrees of bad,” offers Baumgartner’s top medical man, Dr. Jonathan Clark, a former NASA flight surgeon.

Clark was married to space shuttle astronaut Laurel Clark, who was killed aboard Columbia while it was returning to Earth in 2003, and he has dedicated himself to improving astronauts’ chances of survival in a high-altitude disaster.

NASA is paying close attention, eager to improve its spacecraft and spacesuits for emergency escape, but is merely an observer; the energy drink maker is footing the bill and will not say how much it is costing.

The No. 1 fear is a breach of Baumgartner’s suit.

If it breaks open — if, say, he bangs into the capsule while jumping or supersonic shock waves batter him — potentially lethal bubbles could form in his bodily fluids. That’s what’s known as boiling blood. A Soviet military officer died in 1962 after jumping from a balloon at 86,000 feet; the visor of his helmet hit the gondola and cracked.

During the descent, the temperature could be as low as minus 70. Baumgartner’s suit will be all he has between his body and the extreme cold.

Then there’s the risk of a flat spin, in which Baumgartner loses control of his body during the free fall and starts spinning. A long, fast spin, if left unchecked, could turn his eyeballs into blood-soaked, reddish-purple orbs, and he could be left temporarily blind. Also, a massive blood clot could form in his brain.

A small stabilizing chute will automatically deploy if he goes into a flat spin and blacks out or otherwise becomes incapacitated. He also has an emergency chute that will automatically deploy if he is unable to pull the cord on his main chute.

Baumgartner’s team has a plan for every contingency but one: If the balloon ruptures shortly after liftoff because of a gust of wind or something else, the capsule will come crashing down with him inside. He won’t have time to blow the hatch and bail out.

“I have every expectation that he’ll come through this successfully based on our analysis,” Clark says, “but you know, it still is an unknown.”

Kittinger leapt from an open gondola on Aug. 16, 1960, from an altitude of 19.5 miles and reached 614 mph, or Mach 0.9 — records that stand to this day. He was a captain in the Air Force, and the military’s Excelsior project was a test bed for the nation’s young space program.

MacArthur Foundation reveals 2012 ‘genius grants’

By Carla K. Johnson
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mandolin player and composer Chris Thile learned the hard way that when you get a call from the 312 area code this time of year, you should probably answer the phone.

Thile is among 23 recipients of this year’s MacArthur Foundation “genius grants,” which are given in a secrecy-shrouded process. Winners have no idea they’ve been nominated for the $500,000 awards until they get the call, and nominators must remain anonymous.

Thile ignored the incessant phone calls from the foundation at first, thinking they were election-year robocalls. Then he received an ominous message: “Don’t tell anyone about this call.”

His tour manager searched for the number online and told him, “It appears to be from something called the MacArthur Foundation.” It was a name Thile recognized.

“I think I must have turned white,” he said. “I’ve never felt so internally warm. My heart was racing. All of a sudden, I felt very askew physically. I was trying to catch my breath. ... I thought, ‘Oh my God, did I win a MacArthur?’”

The grants, paid over five years, give recipients freedom to pursue a creative vision. Winners, who work in fields ranging from medicine and science to the arts and journalism, don’t have to report how they spend the money.

Thile, who played with Nickel Creek and is now touring with Punch Brothers, said he may use the grant to fund a chamber music project for a bluegrass quintet.

Northwestern University historian Dylan C. Penningroth said he now can expand his search for court records of property owned by slaves in the pre-Civil War South.

“This grant will make it possible for me to think big, to be more ambitious about the time period I cover and the questions I’m trying to answer, like, what’s the connection to the modern civil rights era?” Penningroth said.

For other winners — there have been 873 so far, including this year’s recipients — the grants bring prestige, confirmation and, in some cases, moments of profound reflection about life and fate.

“It left me thinking about my childhood,” said Dominican-American author Junot Diaz, who wrote the Pulitzer-winning novel “The Brief Wondrous Life of Oscar Wao.”

“It would never have dawned on me to think such a thing was possible for me,” Diaz said, reflecting on his early years in New Jersey “struggling with poverty, struggling with English. ... I came from a community that was about as hard-working as you can get and yet no one saw or recognized in any way our contributions or our genius. ... I have to wonder, but for circumstances, how many other kids that I came up with are more worthy of this fellowship than me?”

David Finkel, author and national enterprise editor for the Washington Post, said the grant will allow him to complete a story he began in his book, “The Good Soldiers.” The nonfiction work recounted the experiences of a U.S. Army infantry battalion deployed to Baghdad as part of the 2007 surge. Finkel is now following returning soldiers and their families, “watching a lot of them sink lower and lower and try to get help and maybe not doing so well with the help that’s out there.”

Winning a MacArthur grant felt like an endorsement not only of his own work, he said, but also of the type of long-form journalism he practices, which is in jeopardy as newspapers respond to the digital age. Declining circulation has forced newspaper publishers to shrink the size of their print publications and their staffs. Finkel admires the experimentation under way in journalism, but added: “I’m old-fashioned. The thing I’m most moved by is a well-told, deeply reported long story.”

In the past we have tried other weight loss plans and had some success but it didn’t last. When we started looking (again) for something to help us get control of our weight issues, we knew we had to find something we could both do. We wanted something that would teach us what, when, and in cases of dining out, where to eat, without counting calories or purchasing special pre-packaged foods. Just plain wholesome, natural foods.. the kind we knew we should be eating... fresh fruits, vegetables and lean meats. The Perfect Plan has done that with great success for both of us! Jim has lost 60 pounds and 10 inches in his waist. I have lost 55 pounds, not to mention losing 77 inches and going down 4 sizes. Even more importantly, our physical health has improved with lower cholesterol and blood pressure.

The Perfect Plan does take time and a commitment, but it has been worth every minute, every hour. Any time either of us would become discouraged with our progress, we kept each other going. Our sons Matthew and Jon were our personal cheerleaders and family and friends were encouraging as well. Jan and her staff always provide us with encouragement and support and practical tips. Thanks to all for helping us reach our goals.

seven states in the Appalachian Mountain region.

GEORGIA: DOGWOODS VIVID

The north Georgia mountains typically showcase some of the state's brightest fall colors, and this year will be no exception, state forestry officials say.

Dogwood and maple trees in the upper elevations have already begun to change color, Ken Masten, a district manager with the Georgia Forestry Commission, wrote in a recent report.

"If we get a cold snap in the next two weeks or so where it gets 15 or 20 degrees colder, then the colors will be a little more vivid," said Joe Burgess, a senior forester with the Georgia Forestry Commission.

The colors are a big draw in north Georgia's mountain towns, where tourists come to see the hues of the leaves and then stay to shop or catch some live music at venues such as the Crimson Moon Cafe in Dahlonega, a town 60 miles north of Atlanta.

KENTUCKY: HOPE FOR RED

The mountainous areas of eastern Kentucky typically put on the best fall color show in the state, thanks to the variety of species and dense canopy. The first color transformations of the season are happening on dogwoods, sourgums and tulip poplars, which are showing yellows.

"I think we can always count on a fair degree of color in Kentucky, especially in the east, because of this envious mix of trees that we have," said Dean Henson, naturalist at Pine Mountain State Park in southeastern Kentucky. He said the forests there have up to 35 species of leaf-dropping trees.

The dry summer hasn't hurt the state's prospects for a colorful fall, but the weather over the next two weeks will determine if the most desirable colors — the reds and purples — come out this year, Henson said.

NORTH CAROLINA: STARTING TO SHOW

The Blue Ridge Mountains are famous for showing their true colors each fall, drawing visitors from around the globe. And with dry summer days soon to be followed by cool summer nights, those bright colors may be coming sooner.

North Carolina's foliage season starts in earnest in the high mountain areas in October and runs through mid-November, with colors cascading down to lower elevations throughout the month. In the highest areas, sourwoods are turning red, while maples are changes to shades of yellow, orange and red. High bush blueberries are turning a deep red, while sassafras is starting to turn its usual mixture of the same colors.

"Following one of the hottest summers on record, the North Carolina Piedmont is looking forward to a beautiful fall season," says Dick Thomas of the Piedmont Environmental Center.

that South Carolina's fall foliage will be vibrant — and early — this year.

Blackgum, flowering dogwood, sourwood and sweetgum trees are already beginning to display shades from yellow to orange and bright red. But some of those same trees are already starting to drop their leaves, due to dry conditions.

"The limited summer rains came just in time," said Victor Shelburne, professor emeritus of forestry and natural resources at Clemson University. "While we're still in a drought, we received enough rain to keep most of the leaves on the trees."

Colors are expected to be most brilliant around mid-October in the higher elevations, late October in the lower elevations and early November in the Piedmont.

TENNESSEE: COLOR TEASING

Smokies spokeswoman Molly Schroar noted yellow birch, American beech, mountain maple and hobblebush have begun turning high in the mountains, giving a hint of the rich show to come. But Shroar suggested looking down now and then, to see black-eyed Susans, purple asters, goldenrod and other fall flowers just hitting their peak.

"We're getting teased a little bit by Mother Nature now," said Cindy Dupree of the Tennessee Department of Tourism as she looked out her car window at hits of red sumac and golds in the maples. "It won't be long until it's spectacular."

"On down in the Chattanooga area, that gets just as pretty as I've seen anywhere," Dupree said.

Henderson County Judge-executive Hugh McCormick noted that the ordinance is lengthy (10 pages single-spaced) and does such things as require $1 million of liability insurance, and organizers would have to submit plans for security, public safety and clean up.

tions in the final weeks before the U.S. elections as an opportunity to assail President Barack Obama on foreign policy, an area where he has held clear leads in opinion polls since the killing of Osama bin Laden in 2011.

On Tuesday, leaders of a congressional committee said requests for added security at the consulate in Benghazi were repeatedly denied, despite a string of less deadly terror attacks on the consulate in recent months. Those included an explosion that blew a hole in the security perimeter and another incident in which an explosive device was tossed over the consulate fence. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton told Congress in a letter responding to the accusations that she has set up a group to investigate the Benghazi attack, and it is to begin work this week.

As of early September, the special operations teams still consisted only of liaison officers who were assigned to establish relationships with local governments and U.S. officials in the region. Only limited counterterrorism operations have been conducted in Africa so far.

The White House, the CIA and U.S. Africa Command all declined to comment.

"There are no plans at this stage for unilateral U.S. military operations" in the region, Pentagon spokesman George Little said Tuesday, adding that the focus was on helping African countries build their own forces.

For the Special Operations Command, spokesman Col. Tim Nye would not discuss "the missions and or locations of its counterterrorist forces" except to say that special operations troops are in 75 countries daily conducting missions.

The go-slow approach being taken by the Army's top clandestine counterterrorist unit — known as Delta Force — is an effort by the White House to counter criticism from some U.S. lawmakers, human rights activists and others that the anti-terror fight is shifting largely to a secret war using special operations raids and drone strikes, with little public accountability. The administration has been taking its time when setting up the new unit to get buy-in from all players who might be affected, such as the U.S. ambassadors, CIA station chiefs, regional U.S. military commanders and local leaders.

Eventually, the Delta Force group will form the backbone of a military task force responsible for combating al-Qaida and other terrorist groups across the region with an arsenal that includes drones. But first, it will work to win acceptance by helping North African nations build their own special operations and counterterror units.

And nothing precludes the administration from using other military or intelligence units to retaliate against the perpetrators of the Sept. 11 consulate attack in Benghazi.

But some congressional leaders say the administration is not reacting quickly enough.

"Clearly, they haven't moved fast enough to battle the threat," said House Intelligence Committee Chairman Mike Rogers, R-Mich.

Trees display yellow leaves to motorists last week on the Natchez Trace Parkway in Williamson County, Tenn. As days get shorter and nights become chillier, the annual fall foliage show is getting under way in the Southern Appalachians.

on ash trees, scarlet to purple on the state's dogwoods, and golden bronze on hickories. Virginia's red maples offer brilliant scarlet colors, beech trees feature yellow to orange leaves, poplars present a golden yellow, and reds, browns and russet colors from the state's oaks.

"This year should be a spectacular year because of the summer weather conditions," said Richard Lewis, a spokesman from the Virginia Tourism Corporation. "It's going to produce a lot of very vivid foliage.

Peak colors are expected in the western mountains during mid-to-late October and in the central and eastern parts of Virginia during late October and early November.

WEST VIRGINIA: BEST STILL AHEAD

With most of West Virginia's best fall colors yet to arrive, the best places to see an array of red, yellow and orange are in the highest elevations.

The Division of Forestry recommends drives from Harman to Spruce Knob, from Webster Springs to Valley Head, the Highland Scenic Highway in Pocahontas County, and in the Monongahela National Forest along state Routes 28-55 to the Dolly Sods Wilderness.

With a wide variety of trees and elevations, West Virginia's fall color season began in late September and runs through late October.

Maple, gum, ash, beech and birch trees in higher elevations are showing a mix of colors.

"We are at a higher elevation so we enjoy the leaf color change earlier," said Babcock State Park Superintendent Kevin Cochran. "It's just tremendous here."

Rock, the Smokies botanist, cautioned about planning a leaf-viewing trip too early.

"People seem to jump the gun a lot, thinking Oct. 1 comes and is a magic date."

Rock said the show can last into November, barring storms that bring down the leaves.

Asked when she would take her hike, Rock replied the second to third week of October.

Lady Cols barely miss state golf cut

■ Henderson Co.'s Zehner may still advance to the final round

BOWLING GREEN – Henderson County missed the cut for today's second round of the girls state golf tournament by one stroke. The Lady Colonels, who shot a 364, finished in 13th place — one shot behind Boyle County and Allen County-Scottsville which tied for 11th. Only the top 11 teams moved on to the final round. Twelve players who were all participating as individuals were still on the course when play was halted because of darkness. Those players will resume their rounds at 8 a.m. today, then the cuts will be made and the final round will begin. Senior Abbey Zehner, who led the team with an 85, will have to wait until this morning to see if she makes the cut for the top 20 individual players. "She is going to be close. Some of the players who are ahead of her right now are going to have to struggle," Henderson County coach Jessica Grace said. Zehner started her round with four straight pars and finished her first nine holes at 3-over. Calloway County sophomore Anna Hack leads the individual standings by four strokes after shooting a 4-under 68. Defending champion Louisville Sacred Heart tops the team standings by eight strokes. Henderson County was near the top of the standings after its first nine holes. "We were tied for second at the turn, but everybody had a bad back nine," Grace said. The Lady Colonels, who started their round on No. 10, added 12 strokes from the front to the back. "It got a little misty and cold on the last nine for us," Grace said. "We didn't get to play that side in our practice round on Monday because of the rain, and it really showed." Junior Summer Newsome added an 88 for

Henderson County. Sophomore Taylor Church shot 94. "I feel bad for the girls. They worked really hard this year," Grace said. "We've had a great season. We were undefeated in our matches and won the region. I'm proud of them." Team leaders: Sacred Heart 320, Calloway Co. 328, Henry Clay 338, Green Co. 342, Owensboro Catholic 346. Individual leaders: Anna Hack (Calloway Co.) 68, Cayce Hendrickson (Marshall Co.) 72, Maddie Hamilton (Sacred Heart) 73, Chau Tran (Mercy) 73, Grace Rose (West Jessamine) 76. Henderson Co. Henderson County finished the regular season unbeaten at Colonel Gym and guaranteed itself the best record in the program's history with an intense four-game victory over three-time defending Second Region champion Caldwell County. In a potential preview of the region championship, the Lady Colonels (29-5) handed the Lady Tigers (24-9) their first loss in region play, winning the final three games 25-20, 25-22, 25-20 after losing the opening set 25-18. "This was a very big win for us. They're one of the teams that we wanted to beat the most," said Shelby O'Nan, who was honored as the team's only senior in pregame activities. "It should give us confidence for the postseason, but there's going to be a lot of competition out there." "Caldwell County is a very strong team. They have seven seniors and the returning region player of the year (Jessie Stone)," Henderson County coach Mary Howard said. "This was a great win to cap off a tremendous regular season for us." After pulling even by winning the second game 25-20, the Lady Colonels had to rally from a 14-10 deficit to pull out a 25-22 victory in the third set. "It's really tough to come back from behind like that," said O'Nan, who had three of her team-high 15 kills in a stretch that saw Henderson County take the lead for good. O'Nan added six digs. Katelyn McMillan led the team with 15 digs and also had 10 kills. Alisha McBride had 11 kills and four blocks. Setter Jessica Cannon had 25 assists. Taylor Polivick came off the bench for five kills and two aces. The Lady Colonels trailed only momentarily, at 7-8, in the fourth game to seal their 29th win of the season. Caldwell County won the junior varsity match 21-18, 12-21, 21-15. Henderson County will close the regular season Tuesday at Union County before the Sixth District Tournament contest on Oct. 11 at Union County.

DRAFFENVILLE, Ky. – Henderson County's boys soccer team closed out the regular season with a 3-1 win at Marshall County on Tuesday. The 10th-ranked Colonels improved to 14-3-2 and won't play again until facing Union County next Tuesday in the championship game of the Sixth District Tournament at Colonel Field. Heavy rains in recent days made the field conditions challenging. "The conditions were tough for what we like to do with the ball. We're a passing team and like the ball on the ground," Henderson County coach Benson Pryor said. "We played as well as could be expected with the field conditions." Miguel Valezquez gave the Colonels a 1-0 lead with an unassisted goal in the 16th minute. Early in the second half, Noah Mills scored on an assist from Alec Calvert. Marshall County (13-5-2) scored its only goal on a free kick in the 61st minute, but Zach Jones answered four minutes later with a goal off Calvert's second assist of the game. Henderson County also won the JV match 3-1 to finish at 11-5-1. Waulder Gonzalez, Warner Mattingly and Jonathan Royster had goals for the Colonels, and Joe Bickers had an assist.

Reds deny Cardinals, keep magic number at 1

■ Postseason plans still on hold as Cincinnati captures 3-1 victory

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS – Mat Latos won his fourth straight decision to finish the regular season and Scott Rolen homered off Chris Carpenter, helping the Cincinnati Reds keep the St. Louis Cardinals' postseason plans on hold with a 3-1 victory Tuesday night. The Cardinals' magic number for clinching the second NL wild card remained at one with a game to go, and they were left in the uncomfortable position of watching the Dodgers on television and rooting for a loss for the second straight night. Los Angeles, which began the day two games back with two remaining, played at home against the Giants later Tuesday. Cincinnati, the NL Central champion, remained tied with Washington for the league's best record. The Reds need a win Wednesday and a Nationals loss to earn home-field advantage throughout the postseason. The 37-year-old Carpenter (0-2) has a wealth of big-game experience and went 4-0 in the postseason last fall for the World Series champions, memorably outdueling Philadelphia ace Roy Halladay in Game 5 of the NL division series. Injured most of this season, Carpenter made just his third start of the year gave up a pair of runs in the sixth to snap a 1-all tie. Jay Bruce and Dioner Navarro had RBIs.

Despite the loss, the Cardinals are 11-4 in their last 15 games. They'll draw Homer Bailey (13-10, 3.75 ERA), coming off a no-hitter, in the regular-season finale, with Adam Wainwright (14-13, 3.94) pitching for St. Louis. If the Cardinals and Dodgers end up tied, a one-game playoff would be Thursday in Los Angeles, with the winner advancing to the wild-card game Friday in Atlanta. Latos (14-4) had an abbreviated appearance while freshening up for the postseason and, like teammate Bronson Arroyo a day earlier, worked five innings and threw fewer than 75 pitches. Latos allowed a run on four hits with four strikeouts, all in a span of four at-bats against the bottom of the St. Louis lineup. The 24-year-old Latos was 4-0 with a 2.27 ERA over his last seven starts and set career highs in starts (34) and innings (209 1/3). With what was left of an announced crowd of 39,644 standing and hooting, Aroldis Chapman worked the ninth for his 38th save in 43 chances. He has allowed just one hit in four scoreless appearances covering four innings since returning from a nine-game absence due to shoulder fatigue on Sept. 21. Carpenter gave up three runs and seven hits in six innings while losing for the fifth time in 19 career decisions against Cincinnati. He had seven strikeouts, two more than his total for the first two starts over 11 innings. The Cardinals stranded two runners in the second and third against Latos and had two on with one out in the seventh before Sean Marshall got pinch-hitter Shane Robinson to fly out and Jon Jay on a broken-bat groundout. Rolen tied it in the fourth when he jumped on a first-pitch hanging breaking ball for his eighth homer. Reds manager Dusty Baker played for keeps in the early going. He brought the infield in with a runner on third and one out in the first for Matt Holliday, who hit a sacrifice fly.

Competition stiffens for racing dates

■ Churchill Downs requesting 12 racing days next September

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Kentucky horse tracks are suddenly jostling one another as state regulators hit the homestretch in assigning next year's racing schedule. Most notably, Churchill Downs is competing for September racing dates traditionally allotted to struggling Turfway Park.

Some thoroughbred trainers say the turf squabbles are a sign of the struggles of Kentucky's beleaguered horse racing industry in competing with out-of-state tracks offering higher purses sweetened with revenue from slot machines.

"It's probably a sign of the times to come," Kentucky-based trainer Paul McGee said in a phone interview Tuesday. "Less racing but maybe better-quality racing. It's kind of a survival of the fittest."

Churchill Downs, home of the Kentucky Derby, is requesting 12 racing days next September, which would encroach on the traditional racing calendar of Turfway Park in northern Kentucky.

The Kentucky Horse Racing Commission has a Nov. 1 deadline for assigning race dates. Its next regular meeting is Oct. 17.

Churchill and Ellis Park have both requested racing dates on the last weekend in June, according to the Courier-Journal. Both tracks agree that the commission should pick one or the other, but both argue that the days are customarily theirs.

Attempts to reach Ellis Park owner/president Ron Geary for comment were unsuccessful.

Churchill is seeking permission for racing during four, three-day weekends next September. That would augment the famed Louisville track's traditional spring meet and a fall meet run mostly in November.

Track President Kevin Flanery said Churchill could offer purses of at least $200,000 per day in September, about twice the amount of winnings Turfway reportedly offered during its 16-day racing schedule last month.

That could help entice more trainers to keep their horses in Kentucky to race. Trainer Dale Romans said he thinks September races could be a winner for Churchill, adding that could help strengthen the Kentucky racing circuit.

"It's a matter of survival," said Romans, who has shifted much of his racing operation to New York, which offers casino-enhanced purses. "Something has to change in Kentucky because we can't just keep declining."

Flanery said Churchill would look to include night racing and stakes races, possibly tune-ups for the Breeders' Cup.

"We certainly think there's an opportunity for us to play big on the national stage in September," Flanery said.

Meanwhile, Kentucky Downs at Franklin is asking for three racing dates next March, another time traditionally set aside for Turfway. That would be on top of five days of racing the southern Kentucky track is requesting in September.

"We have the purse money to afford to do it," said Corey Johnson, president of Kentucky Downs, which has benefited from an influx of revenue from casino-style Instant Racing, which allows gamblers to wager on previously run but unidentified horse races.

Turfway Park officials did not immediately respond to several email and phone requests for comments Tuesday.

On Monday, Turfway operations director Chip Bach said the track's September racing helps pay for its racing in the winter, The Courier-Journal reported. The loss of its September dates would cost $500,000 in revenues related to live racing and result in cutbacks, likely in the winter, the newspaper reported, citing another Turfway official.

Turfway's daily purses have sagged in recent years, outpaced by tracks in other states that boost their purses with an infusion of casino gambling money. The suburban track in Florence scratched its Kentucky Cup Day of Champions, its premier racing event in the fall, to prop up purses for other races during the September meet.

For years, Kentucky's tracks have been united in pushing for a proposal to allow them to add slot machines, but their efforts have been stymied for years in the state General Assembly.

Briefs

Texans maintain top spot in rankings

NEW YORK — The Houston Texans are on top of the AP Pro32 NFL power rankings again, and getting ready for the Monday night spotlight when they visit the New York Jets.

The Texans became the first team to retain the No. 1 spot after a resounding 38-14 rout of the Tennessee Titans to remain unbeaten in four games.

The other two unbeaten, Atlanta and Arizona, needed game-deciding field goals to stay perfect.

MLB completes 8-year TV deal

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball has agreed with Fox and Turner Sports on eight-year contracts that will run through 2021 and keep the World Series on Fox.

Fox also will retain rights to the All-Star game and a league championship series every year, and add coverage of two division series starting in 2014.

TBS will retain the rights to air one league championship series, two division series and one wild-card game.

Post times set for Breeders' Cup

ARCADIA, Calif. — The Breeders' Cup Classic, the $5 million showcase race of thoroughbred racing's two-day world championships, will be run at 5:30 p.m. PST on Nov. 3 at Santa Anita.

It will highlight the program on the second day of the 29th annual event. Nine Breeders' Cup races will be run on Saturday, with three others completing the 12-race card. Six Breeders' Cup races will be run on Nov. 2, with four others on the card.

No progress made in NHL negotiations

NEW YORK — NHL labor talks resumed Tuesday at the league office, but no progress was made as both sides continued to focus on secondary matters and not the core economic issues that continue to divide owners and players.

"Today," NHL Deputy Commissioner Bill Daly said, "was not overly encouraging."

There are no further talks scheduled.

Germany wins in mixed-gender race

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Not even the elite men's swimmers could catch Britta Steffen.

In the sport's first top-level event featuring both sexes, Steffen held off two fast-charging male swimmers to anchor Germany to victory in a 4x50-meter mixed relay at the World Cup meet Tuesday in Dubai.

Steffen is the world record-holder in the 50 freestyle.

Yankees win, hold their lead

■ Orioles win to push race to final day

Wire reports

Raul Ibanez tied it with a pinch-hit homer in the ninth inning then had an RBI single in the 12th, helping the Yankees remain a game up on Baltimore in the AL East with one game to go by beating the Boston Red Sox 4-3 on Tuesday night.

With a second comeback spurred by Ibanez in the last 10 days, the Yankees need a win or Orioles loss on the final day of the season to secure their 13th division title since 1996. The Orioles beat Tampa Bay 1-0 earlier.

If the teams end up even after Wednesday's games, they'll play a tiebreaker Thursday in Baltimore.

The Yankees kept missing chances on a misty night. They were 0-58 when trailing after eight innings this season, then rallied in the ninth.

■ Orioles 1, Rays 0: Chris Davis homered for the sixth straight game and the Baltimore Orioles overcame a club-record 15 strikeouts by James Shields to beat the Tampa Bay Rays 1-0 Tuesday night, pushing the AL East race to the final day of the season.

Baltimore began the night one game behind the first-place New York Yankees, who were trailing Boston in the ninth inning.

Orioles rookie Miguel Gonzalez (9-4) limited the Rays to two singles over 6 1-3 innings. The right-hander walked two and struck out seven before manager Buck Showalter turned the game over to the bullpen.

Davis joined Hall of Famer Reggie Jackson as the only Baltimore players to homer in six consecutive games, connecting off Shields (15-10) in the fourth. The Orioles managed only one other hit

The New York Yankees' Curtis Granderson celebrates with Raul Ibanez after scoring on Ibanez's ninth-inning, two-run home run during their game against the Boston Red Sox at Yankee Stadium in New York on Tuesday night.

— Nate McLouth's sixth-inning single — in Shields' third complete game.

■ Royals 4, Tigers 2: Miguel Cabrera had two hits and drove in two runs before leaving in the fifth inning, and the Kansas City Royals rallied to beat his AL Central champion Detroit Tigers 4-2 Tuesday night.

With one game remaining in the regular season, Cabrera leads the American League in average (.331), home runs (44) and RBIs (139), putting him on the brink of becoming the first Triple Crown winner since Boston's Carl Yastrzemski in 1967.

■ Blue Jays 4, Twins 3: Chad Jenkins earned his first major league win, Kelly Johnson hit a two-run home run and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Minnesota Twins 4-3 on Tuesday night.

Making his third career start, Jenkins (1-3) allowed two runs and five hits in five-plus innings. The right-hander walked one and struck out two.

■ Indians 4, White Sox 3: Jason Donald singled home the winning run with two outs in the 12th inning, lifting the Cleveland Indians over the Chicago White Sox 4-3 on Tuesday night.

Lonnie Chisenhall doubled with one out against Matt Thornton (4-10), who then intentionally walked Russ Canzler.

■ Marlins 4, Mets 3: New York Mets knuckleballer R.A. Dickey struck out one-shot wonder Adam Greenberg, but also gave up two homers in his final start of a Cy Young-hopeful season and the Mets lost to the Miami Marlins in 11 innings 4-3 Tuesday.

The Marlins' Greenberg struck out on three pitches against Dickey when he batted for the first time in seven years in the sixth inning. Greenberg signed a one-day contract before the game, his first since he was beaned in his major league debut in 2005.

■ Nationals 4, Phillies 2: A smile crept across Adam LaRoche's face while he rounded the bases Tuesday night after hitting his career-high 33rd homer to become the third Nationals player with 100 RBIs in a season, another celebratory moment for NL East champion Washington during a 4-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

When the Nationals Park gates opened, early-arriving fans in the crowd of 33,546 were treated to a video montage of alcohol-spraying and general mirth-making from a night earlier, when the home team clinched its first division title since moving from Montreal in 2005.

■ Pirates 5, Braves 1: Kevin Correia pitched effectively into the seventh inning, Garrett Jones homered and the Pittsburgh Pirates won consecutive games for the first time in four weeks, beating the Atlanta Braves 5-1 Tuesday night.

The Pirates (79-82) tied for their most wins in a season since their North American major professional sports record streak of 20 losing seasons began in 1993. The 1999 Pirates went 79-83.

■ Astros 3, Cubs 0: Bud Norris pitched six shut-out innings, Jason Castro homered and the Houston beat the Chicago Cubs 3-0 Tuesday night in a matchup of 100-loss teams.

The season-ending series between NL Central clubs marks the first meeting of 100-loss team in the majors since 1962, when the Cubs played the New York Mets.

Bears back in sync but attention is still on Cutler

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bears offense appears to be back in sync, even if the same might not be true of quarterback Jay Cutler and his offensive coordinator.

Cutler played one of his most impressive games as an NFL quarterback Monday night in beating the Dallas Cowboys 34-18, connecting on 18-of-24 passes for 275 yards and two touchdowns.

Even after posting his third-highest career passer rating (140.1), a lot of the postgame attention was again focused on Cutler's sideline behavior.

Cutler at one point sat down on the bench after he'd obviously been irritated by confusion on the field regarding a play call the previous series. When offensive coordinator Mike Tice sat down next to him and began talking, Cutler stood up and walked away.

"I don't have to sit by him the whole game, do I?" Cutler said afterward. Then he accused media members of trying to sell newspapers and asked, "What are we looking for here?"

Told it appeared he'd snubbed his coach, Cutler said, "Just because I walk off and go and get water it doesn't mean much."

Wide receiver Brandon Marshall played it with a tongue in cheek when asked about it.

"Jay frustrated? No. Jay's never frustrated or mad," Marshall said. "That's part of the game. We wanted to have a lot of rhythm coming into this football game. It took a quarter to get there."

Two weeks ago, Cutler shoved left tackle J'Marcus Webb following some shoddy blocking, and after that 23-10 loss to the Green Bay Packers he criticized the play of the team but indicated his own play had been both good and bad.

Keselowski drops Nationwide race

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. — Brad Keselowski is doing some basic math to focus on his bid for the Sprint Cup championship: He has added his older sister to his support group and scaled back his schedule.

Keselowski goes into Sunday's race at Talladega, where he won in May, with a five-point lead over five-time champion Jimmie Johnson in the standings. He has won two of the first three Chase races, but knows he must be at the top of his game to claim his first Sprint Cup title.

He said Tuesday that he has dropped the Nationwide Series race at Kansas from his schedule and Ryan Blaney will drive for Penske Racing in his place. Further reductions to his schedule could be coming.

"I've made the decision this week to drastically limit the Nationwide races I'm going to run through the Chase," Keselowski said during an appearance to promote the Oct. 13 race at Charlotte Motor Speedway. "We're going to play it by ear based on those weeks go."

It's been going pretty good these days for Keselowski, and he credits some of his success to his sister, Dawn Nicholas, who has relocated from Michigan to North Carolina. Keselowski likened the relationship to the one Dale Earnhardt Jr., has with his sister, Kelley.

"Dale Jr. was kind of a role model for me in that sense, with how he has Kelley and the things she does for him - and keeps him straight in some ways," Keselowski said. "Sometimes, you're just looking for somebody that's got your back. I do have other people who have got my back, but it's different when it's family."

Keselowski believes his performance has improved since his sister moved in with him and began helping him run his foundation. She's 10 years older than he is, and he joked that she is his "mind coach" — a riff on what the Carolina Panthers recently said they've obtained to help quarterback Cam Newton.

PGA Tour supplies the tonic for Ryder Cup hangover

The PGA Tour supplied the best tonic possible Tuesday to cure the Americans of a Ryder Cup hangover.

It staged a press conference to mark the official one-year countdown to the Presidents Cup, the one team event that Americans still seem capable of winning. Then again, it was held at Muirfield Village, where in 1987 they lost the Ryder Cup on home soil for the first time.

It hasn't been the same since.

These days, the closest the Americans ever get to that 17-inch trophy is the emblem of it stitched on their team uniforms.

Europe now has won seven of the last nine times in the Ryder Cup, and the only reason the dominance isn't even greater is because Justin Leonard knocked in a 45-foot putt on the 17th hole at The Country Club. The other win was in 2008 at Valhalla, even though the Americans didn't have Tiger Woods. Or maybe they won because he didn't play.

DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The immediate question is who the PGA of America will select as the next captain, but that's assuming the decision will have a bearing on the outcome. In some corners, the captain's role is overrated — until a team loses, and the fans and media need someone to blame.

The next Ryder Cup will be in 2014 in Scotland, which officials referred to as the home of golf. That's true, although the bagpipes surely will sound a little different on a golf course at Gleneagles designed by Jack Nicklaus.

Before looking ahead, it's worth looking back with a few observations about one of the best Ryder Cup competitions ever:

■ Was this really the "Miracle at Medinah?"

The best slogans are built around alliteration, and this could be called the "Meltdown at Medinah," depending on your colors. It was remarkable, no doubt, because six of the 12 singles matches could have gone either way. By the numbers, Europe matched a Ryder Cup record by rallying from a 10-6 deficit on the final day, same as the Americans at Brookline in 1999. The difference is that Europe did this on the road. And the American comeback was easier because Europe had three Ryder Cup rookies who did not hit a shot until Sunday singles.

This Ryder Cup had 24 of the top 35 players in the world. Throw in 18-hole matches, and there's no such thing as a sure thing. Remember, Europe had a three-point lead going into the final day at Wales before a home crowd and it came down to the last match. The lesson going forward is that no lead is safe.

The only "miracle" reference should be to Saturday afternoon, when the Americans had a 10-4 lead and was ahead in the final match. It looked as though they would have an 11-5 lead at worst until Ian Poulter birdied his last five holes and Europe picked up an invaluable point — and the momentum.

■ Rory McIlroy is a sure thing.

Boy Wonder might be the only guy who can roll out of a bed and win a singles match at the Ryder Cup. McIlroy didn't sleep in, he just got the time zones mixed up. But there was a feeling that whoever the Americans had facing him didn't stand a chance. Jim Furyk referred to McIlroy as the "present day Tiger Woods," and he might be right. Even with the match all square, there was never a sense that McIlroy was going to lose.

■ Man of the match.

Martin Kaymer holed the putt that clinched the Ryder Cup for Europe, but there was no mistaking its star. Ian Poulter became the first captain's pick to go 4-0, and he might have won them all if Jose Maria Olazabal had not held him out Friday afternoon. There were only four matches all week when a team or a player was behind at any point on the back nine and rallied to win. Poulter was involved in two of them.

His career record is now

12-3, the highest winning percentage of any European player in history.

■ Tiger Woods as the anchor.

Curtis Strange was criticized in 2002 for sending out Woods in the 12th and final match Sunday at The Belfry for two reasons. His point might be irrelevant at that stage (it was) and he would not be able to contribute to any momentum from an earlier spot in the lineup. Davis Love III did the same at Medinah.

Woods actually was in the right spot. He just didn't deliver.

The Americans needed to see Woods take control of his match against Francesco Molinari, knowing they would be assured a point in that anchor match. Woods fell behind two holes early. He took the lead for the first time on the 13th hole, and the match was still square with two holes remaining.

All that offense keeps fans coming

■ College ADs know best way to fill stadiums is to score lots and lots of points

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

When West Virginia Athletic Director Oliver Luck was looking for a new football coach, he wanted one who would not only win, but do it in a way that got Mountaineers fans excited — excited enough to pack Milan Puskar Stadium seven or eight times a season.

"People do want to be entertained," said Luck, a former NFL quarterback. "There's nothing quite as nice as a beautiful post pattern thrown properly."

West Virginia fans got to watch dozens of properly thrown passes on Saturday, when the eighth-ranked Mountaineers beat Baylor 70-63, the centerpiece of yet another college football weekend filled with high-scoring marquee games.

Several factors have contributed to the trend of high-powered offenses dominating college football in recent years — outside of Tuscaloosa, Ala., that is.

There is the improved development of quarterbacks, thanks in large part to 7-on-7 camps for high schoolers; the prevalence of spread offenses that neutralize a defense's best players and exploit its weak ones; and the up-tempo style that offenses use to squeeze in as many snaps as possible.

Another reason is money. The old adage is true: Offense sell tickets. And these days there is more pressure than ever on athletic directors to sell football game tickets to fund their programs.

Luck found his man in Dana Holgorsen, a coaching descendent of Mike Leach, and Mountaineers fans have been partying ever since. West Virginia went to the Orange Bowl last season, and laid 70 points on Clemson.

"Everywhere you go you have to keep in mind we're competing for the pocket books and the minds of the college football fans," Luck said Monday in telephone interview.

West Virginia is averaging 53 points per game, third-best in major college football and one of six teams averaging at least 50. Another 15 teams are scoring more than 40 per game. Of the 124 teams playing in FCS, 55 are averaging at least 30 points per game.

"I don't want to discredit the importance of defense," Luck said, "but I think people expect, now, more high-scoring games at the college level.

"I think a lot of athletic directors recognize that."

No doubt. Of the 28 coaches hired during and after last season, 14 were once offensive coordinators, including Rich Rodriguez, hired by Arizona, and Leach, who was hired by Washington State.

Another five of those coaches have predominantly offensive backgrounds, including Urban Meyer at Ohio State. And several of the former defensive coordinators, such as Todd Graham at Arizona State and Tim Beckman at Illinois, have a commitment to up-tempo, spread offenses on their head coaching resumes.

There is no end in sight to the offensive era of college football.

As Luck points out, good quarterbacks are easier than ever to find, coaches tend to steer their best players toward the offensive side of the ball, and dominant defensive linemen are the rarest commodity in the sport.

For the majority of schools playing major college football, it's easier to build a stellar offense than a staunch defense. And fans dig touchdowns.

BIG EAST FIGHTS BACK

In realignment, the Atlantic Coast Conference has pounded the Big East over the last year, luring Pittsburgh, Syracuse and

Notre Dame away. On the football field, the Big East is getting some payback this season.

The Big East is 4-3 against the ACC this season, including two victories against Virginia Tech. Cincinnati beat the Hokies 27-24 on Saturday after Pitt blew out Virginia Tech earlier this season.

To make it just a bit more satisfying for the Big East, the week before the Panthers upset the Hokies, Cincinnati blew out departing Pitt.

Why does this matter? The Big East needs to be able to sell itself as being good as the ACC on the field to land the billion dollar television contract and attractive bowl spots it needs to stay relevant in college football's new world order.

HEISMAN WATCH

Just give West Virginia quarterback Geno Smith the Heisman Trophy, right? Not so fast.

Smith's remarkable eight-touchdown pass performance in that crazy victory against Baylor had some swooning over the senior quarterback.

Former Ohio State running back Eddie George, who won the 1995 Heisman and now works as an analyst for Fox, went so far as to say: "What we witnessed today was the 2012 Heisman Trophy winner."

Smith is undoubtedly the front-runner, but with two months of the season left and the Mountaineers yet to play a true road game, it's way too soon to be handing the Heisman to anyone.

QUICK HITS

■ Duke is 4-1, two victories away from bowl eligibility. The Blue Devils haven't played in a bowl game since 1995 and haven't won one since the 1961. Don't make vacation plans yet, Blue Devils fans. Those last two victories won't come easy, though beating Virginia at home on Saturday would be huge.

■ Penn State has now won three straight going into its home game against No. 24 Northwestern on Saturday. A winning season for coach Bill O'Brien will be an enormous step toward Penn State surviving the crippling sanctions the NCAA handed down for the Jerry Sandusky scandal.

■ Remember Isaiah Crowell? At this point, many Georgia fans have probably forgotten about him, too. Crowell ran for 850 yards as a freshmen for the Bulldogs last season, but was kicked off the team during the summer after being arrested on weapons charges. Georgia has had no problem replacing him with two new fabulous freshmen, Todd Gurley and Keith Marshall. As for Crowell, he's playing at Alabama State, where he leads the team with 342 yards rushing and six touchdowns.

Miss. State ready to get back to SEC after break

By David Brandt
Associated Press

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Mississippi State coach Dan Mullen said his team enjoyed a week away from football and got some much needed rest.

The Bulldogs weren't too tired, though. Most of September had already been a vacation.

No. 19 Mississippi State (4-0, 1-0 SEC) has had an extended break from league play since beating Auburn on Sept. 8. The Bulldogs have won two nonconference games and taken their off week in the interim, but are eager to get back to league play against Kentucky (1-4, 0-2) on Saturday.

"You don't want to call the first four games the pre-season, but it is different," Mullen said. "Your goals are to get a shot at playing in your conference championship. These are the games that really matter."

It remains to be seen whether Kentucky can provide Mississippi State with a challenge.

The Wildcats are without quarterback Maxwell Smith indefinitely after the sophomore suffered an ankle injury against South Carolina. Kentucky coach Joker Phillips says he'll rotate freshmen Jalen Whitlow and Patrick Towles against the Bulldogs.

Whitlow completed 12 of 23 passes for 114 yards, ran for a touchdown and threw two interceptions after coming in for Smith in the Wildcats' 38-17 loss to South Carolina. Towles hasn't played yet this season.

The Whitlow/Towles combination appears a huge mismatch against Mississippi State's veteran secondary. Senior cornerback Johnthan Banks has 15 career interceptions, including three this season. The Bulldogs' other cornerback — Darius Slay — has four interceptions.

The starting secondary of Banks, Slay, Corey Broomfield and Nickoe Whitley has combined for 126 games played, 94 starts and 37 interceptions, including eight that were returned for touchdowns.

"Everybody attacks freshmen," Slay said. "We've got older guys, and I know we'll have a package to confuse the quarterback since they're young."

Colts' Arians ready to step in for ill Pagano

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Bruce Arians always wanted to coach his own NFL team.

The chance has arrived, and not how he wanted it to go. He will be replacing an old friend on an interim basis in the middle of a season because of a serious illness. The longtime NFL offensive coordinator has no illusions about the job as he tries to help the Colts get better while everyone hopes coach Chuck Pagano returns soon from leukemia treatments.

"This isn't a head coaching job for me right now," Arians said after being named Indy's interim coach Monday. "It's just an expanded role as coordinator until Chuck comes back."

Arians was an obvious choice.

The Colts' front office followed Pagano's advice and hired Arians, an assistant who had coached with or against Pagano for the better part of a decade. He's someone who mentored three quarterbacks selected No. 1 overall (Peyton Manning, Tim Couch and now Andrew Luck) and has the same kind of personality that hooked the Colts on Pagano.

Team owner Jim Irsay and new general manager Ryan Grigson also liked his previous experience in Indy and his resume.

Arians also played a key role in the development of the other as offensive coordinator — before his forced retirement earlier this year. He spent two seasons as Paul "Bear" Bryant's running backs coach at Alabama and six seasons as Temple's head coach.

"He's a veteran. He knows this game well. He has a great synergy with the staff and with Chuck," Grigson said. "He's going to be able to bridge that gap between

Pittsburgh quarterback Ben Roethlisberger and won two Super Bowl rings with the Steelers — one as the receivers coach, Chuck and himself and this team because they (the assistants) have a brotherhood on that staff like I've never seen. Chuck's our brother, and we are all here for him. Bruce is the man to lead us forward while our leader is down."

Arians understands this peculiar predicament better than most.

In two decades as an NFL assistant, Arians has seen and done just about everything. And five years ago, Arians was the one being diagnosed with cancer. He needed a radical prostatectomy just before the NFL draft.

"That phone call is not a fun one," Arians recalled. "I was sitting in my office and they kept telling me there's nothing wrong, nothing wrong and then the doctor calls and tell you you've got cancer. You really don't remember the next 24 hours. ... I'll tell you I could hardly drive home. It's devastating to get that message. Then you figure out, like we always do, what's the plan."

The plan in Indy is to let Arians call the shots temporarily. Players universally approve.

"Coach Arians and I spoke briefly about making sure the communication is not lost, so I don't think it will be," Luck said. "He's seen everything in the world of football, so I'm sure he'll do a great job and still manage to keep his (finger on the) pulse of everything the offense is doing."

Holiday sales seen rising 4.1 percent in 2012

By Anne D'Innoezio
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Americans are expected to spend more during what's traditionally the busiest shopping season of the year, but they're not exactly ready to shop 'til they drop like they have been in the past two years.

The National Retail Federation, the nation's largest retail trade group, said Tuesday that it expects sales during the winter holiday shopping period in November and December to rise 4.1 percent this year. That's more than a percentage point lower than the growth in each of the past two years, and the smallest increase since 2009 when sales were up just 0.3 percent.

The projections are an important indicator for retailers that depend on the last two months of the year for up to 40 percent of their annual sales. But the estimates also offer valuable insight for economists who closely watch consumer spending, which accounts for up to 70 percent of economic activity.

The holiday shopping season is one gauge of not only the shopping habits, but also the mindset of the average American during what has turned out to be a slow and uneven economic recovery. Right now, people are feeling better about rising home prices and a rebounding stock market, but job growth is still weak and prices for everything from food to gas are higher. At the same time, there's uncertainty about who the next president will be and some Americans worry that the U.S. debt crisis could lead to another recession.

It's Americans' worries about the economic uncertainty that led the National Retail Federation to predict slower growth during the winter holiday shopping season than the increase of 5.6 percent and 5.5 percent in 2010 and 2011, respectively.

Still, the forecast is higher than the average growth of 3.5 percent for November and December over the past 10 years. And it continues a growth trend that began after holiday sales fell 4.4 percent in 2008 during the middle of the recession. (The federation for the first time is counting online sales and sales from the auto parts and accessories business. It has revised every year's holiday figures from 2000 to reflect the change.)

The federation's forecast also is still more optimistic than the International Council of Shopping Centers, a mall trade group that last week said it predicts a 2.9 percent increase. It's also higher than the 3.3 percent growth estimated by ShopperTrak, a Chicago-based analyzer of retail foot traffic, last month.

The forecasts come as retailers wrap up what's expected to be a strong back-to-school shopping season. There have been no official numbers out on sales for that shopping period, which is typically the second biggest shopping season of the year and a barometer for what people are willing to spend during the winter holidays.

COMMODITIES

The price of soybeans has hit the lowest level in nearly three months as a fast-paced harvest delivers more supplies to the marketplace.

November soybeans fell 29.75 cents to finish Tuesday at $15.305 per bushel. That's the lowest price since July 12.

The price for the protein-rich bean hit an all-time high of $17.7025 per bushel in late August on concerns that the drought had damaged the crop. But early harvest reports show yields have been better than expected and overall demand remains strong.

The U.S. Agriculture Department said 41 percent of the crop had been harvested by Sunday, compared with an average of 19 percent over the previous four years.

Sterling Smith, a Citi futures specialist, said exports sales have been slower this week because markets in China are closed for public holidays.

The corn harvest also is continuing at a rapid pace, with 54 percent of the crop harvested as of Sunday, the agency said. That compared with an average of 20 percent over the previous four years.

Corn for December delivery rose 1.5 cents to end at $7.5825 per bushel and December wheat dropped 12.75 cents to $8.715 per bushel.

Advice

Announce pregnancy news to family one at a time

Dear Amy: I am 35 and have an 18-year-old daughter. She will graduate from high school in May. Her father lives with us. He is disabled and is in a wheelchair. Her father and I have not had a “real” male-female relationship in years. He believed we were together until earlier this year when I told him I wanted to move on. He is not happy about it and has talked about moving into a group home. During all of that drama, I started seeing someone I dated in high school. My daughter and her father know about this man, and he is very upset. He says I should have waited until he moved out. I don't know if he will ever move out. I care for him very much and never wanted him to live in a group home. The other man and I fell in love, and I just found out that I am pregnant. I do want another baby; it's just not the ideal situation, and I do not want my daughter's father to feel he is forced to move out. I don't know what to do or how to tell people. Do you have any advice for me about my moral dilemma? — Probably Pregnant

Dear Probably: In a moral dilemma, you are trying to decide between two equally difficult options. In your situation, you have already made the choices that a dilemma would force you to ponder in advance of acting. Because you have forced your daughter's father (you don't mention being married) into a sort of “open” domestic partnership, you may all decide that it would be best for him to stay in the home. This is one option. Otherwise you could help him explore other housing options. He might do well with a roommate or family member in a nearby apartment. The best way to disclose this news is to do it one person at a time, over the course of one or two days. Start with your current partner, then your daughter's father. After giving him time to digest this news, you should talk to your daughter. Your 18-year-old could present you with the biggest emotional challenge in the short term. Prepare for this.

Dear Amy: “Heartbroken” wrote about a “groomzilla” who had planned an elaborate destination wedding in Europe that many guests could not afford or were not able to attend. The same thing happened in our family, and we were also heartbroken. We decided to host a big party stateside after the wedding to include guests who couldn't make it, and I'm so glad we did. — Parents of the Bride
Dear Parents: I love your generous solution. Thank you.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Oct. 3). People adapt to your style and celebrate your individuality this year. New adventures on the career front await. You could even decide that you're better off working for yourself. You may be temporarily inconvenienced in order to make room for big improvements in January. March events feature the exotic and unusual. Cancer and Pisces people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 14, 39, 1 and 20.
ARIES: (March 21-April 19). Staying purposeful will be a challenge, but it's one you can conquer with a simple household item: a pen. When you take the time to write out a plan before you leave the house, you won't get bogged down with useless tasks.
TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). You think differently than others now — or rather you don't think, and that's what's different. It would be easy to mentally obsess about an event and talk yourself out of it in the process, but you're too daring for that.
GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). When you follow through with a commitment even though you had no idea how hard it would be, this is an experience. When you do know it will be hard, and you do it anyway, this is an act of love.
CANCER: (June 22-July 22). You undertake a big job that is also quite physical in its demands. It's as though you have a wagon that you'll load and unload. This work allows your mind to rest.
LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). You are not interested in pleasing the one person who can appreciate how wonderfully talented you are. You want your work to be accessible to all — or at least to many — and you'll act accordingly.
VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's pretty easy to ignore a person who doesn't bring anything memorable to the table. But you're too kindhearted to let that happen. You'll create a safe environment and draw someone out of his shell.
LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're always happiest when your relationships are in good standing, which is why you'll make an unnecessary gesture this afternoon. You'd rather err on the side of caution than risk hurting someone.
SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Just as it furthers the interests of humans to visit outer space, your interests will be furthered by embarking on a difficult and gargantuan task. In the days to come, you'll feel more and more up to the task.
SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Take advantage of the easy luck that befalls you today. Your guiding planet reverses tomorrow, and you'll have to work a little harder for your good fortune.
CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). No one likes to have to repeat the same words over and over to someone who refuses to listen. You'll be inspired to take a different tactic with the stubborn and selectively deaf person in your life.
AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The thing you do to cheer yourself up doesn't need to be reserved for gloomy occasions. You'll be in a decent mood as it is, so why not take it up a notch by treating yourself for no reason in particular?
PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). There's a difference in the dynamic between you and a loved one, and it's something you could get used to. Even when you grow, you don't grow apart. You find a way to connect along the way.

Put store bought cookies in oven for crisp treat

Dear Heloise: Desperate for a crispy cookie, but tired of the soft, chemical-tasting ones from the grocery store, I stuck a store-bought chocolate-chip cookie in the toaster oven at 350 degrees for about five minutes. The edges and parts of the bottom were actually dark brown. After cooling a bit, it tasted delicious and crisp. I'm glad I didn't discover this trick earlier in my life, or I'd probably be 10 pounds heavier.
— Elizabeth D., via email
Dear Elizabeth: Love your hint, and it can be a trick to make warm, almost-home-style cookies from store-bought. Please do “test” the time and temperature so they don't burn.

Dear Heloise: Many restaurants serve bread with olive oil to dip it in, but I don't always want to have to go out to a restaurant to get it. So, I've started making it myself at home. Any small dish of oil mixed with freshly ground pepper, pepper flakes, minced garlic or other spices will do. I like to add Parmesan cheese on top for a delicious appetizer.

Our greatest need is to know God, do His will

Dear Dr. Graham: Why should someone who lived 2,000 years ago make any difference to us today? I know Jesus was supposed to be a great man, but there have been lots of notable people since then, so why is He so important? — C.T.
Dear C.T.: If Jesus were just another notable person, then you might be right. After all, Jesus never commanded an army or exercised great political power. And yet no other individual has had such a profound impact on human society. Why is this? The reason is because Jesus was more than just another great man. The Bible tells us that He also was God in human flesh — that is, He was both fully man and fully God. He came into this world to show us what God is like, and He also came to tear down the barrier between us and God — a barrier caused by our sin. The Bible says, “No one has ever seen God, but God the One and Only, who is at the Father's side, has made him known” (John 1:18). Over the centuries, millions have believed this about Jesus and have committed their lives to Him — and when they have, their lives have been transformed.

Love has replaced hate; compassion has replaced indifference; sacrificial service has replaced greed. And because their lives have been transformed, society itself has been transformed as they sought to make the world a better place. Our greatest need is to know God and do His will — and this is your greatest need as well. Don't be satisfied with anything less, but by faith ask Christ to come into your life and change you from within. Like millions of others, you too can discover that “Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today and forever” (Hebrews 13:8).

Pain relievers can help lingering symptoms from shingles

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: Will you please do a column on shingles? I have gone through 12 weeks of the nastiest, worst illness possible. I never hear anything on TV about it.
— J.C.
Dear J.C.: I'll have another go at shingles. Others probably think I overdo it. But it's such a common problem of older people that it deserves repetition. Shingles is the work of the reawakened chickenpox virus that has been asleep in nerve cells ever since a person was infected, usually in childhood. It's a safe bet to say you were infected even if you don't recall it; more than 95 percent of adults were. The rash of shingles usually disappears in two to four weeks. Pain, however, can stay with you. The pain is now called postherpetic neuralgia. In making the trip to the skin, the virus damaged the nerve roots that it crawled down to reach the skin. Pain is a consequence of the nerve injury.

A large number of treatments exist for this aftermath of shingles. One is amitriptyline, whose primary use is relief of depression. It also has pain-relieving properties in doses lower than what's given for depression. Neurontin (gabapentin) is a seizure-control medicine that often is successful in suppressing pain. The extended-release form of this drug, called Gralise, is given only once a day. Lyrica (pregabalin) has had a good record in quieting postherpetic neuralgia. Lidocaine skin patches, placed on the skin where pain is felt, are another way to ease pain without taking an oral medicine. Lidocaine is a numbing agent. The latest innovation for shingles treatment is Qutenza, another skin-patch medicine. The doctor has to apply this patch, and lets it stay on the skin for an hour. Then the doctor removes the patch, and the effect of the medicine lasts for three months. It is expensive. In cases where no treatment brings relief, opioids — pain relievers of the morphine family — have a place in treatment, so long as they are supervised carefully by the doctor. The booklet on shingles explains this problem in depth. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 1201, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Paul Donohue will be retiring at the end of 2012. Dr. Keith Roach will share the byline during the transition period and assume sole authorship of “To Your Good Health” beginning in January. Readers may write the doctors or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

The first presidential debate is an occasion for the entire country to take the measure of the men who hope to lead the free world.

The Wednesday night event will be the first time people can make a direct comparison between Democrat Barack Obama and Republican Mitt Romney as they stand face to face.

Most voters already have decided who they'll back, and voters in some states that permit early voting have already begun to cast ballots. Others in key swing states are about to.

For them, and for all those still undecided, the series of three presidential debates and one vice presidential forum could help reinforce impressions or help form them.

Here are some questions and answers about this traditional quadrennial sparring contest:

Q: WHAT SUBJECT MATTER OR POLICY AREAS WILL WEDNESDAY'S DEBATE COVER?

A: The first debate will focus on domestic policy and will be divided into six 15-minute segments. Moderator Jim Lehrer, executive editor of the PBS "NewsHour," announced on Sept. 19 that three of the segments will deal with the economy, one will deal with health care, one with the role of government and one with governing.

Q: WHEN AND WHERE WILL THE FIRST DEBATE BE HELD, AND WHERE CAN I SEE IT ON TELEVISION?

A: The debate will be held at the University of Denver from 8-9:30 p.m. It will be broadcast live on C-Span, ABC, CBS, FOX, NBC, and cable news channels CNN, Fox News and MSNBC. (It also will be live streamed on several news websites and on YouTube.)

Q: WHEN DID THE TRADITION OF HOLDING PRE-ELECTION PRESIDENTIAL DEBATES BEGIN?

A: In 1948 there was a one-hour mid-May debate between Republican presidential candidates Thomas E. Dewey and Harold E. Stassen held in Portland, Ore., and broadcast on radio. It was limited to a single issue: outlawing the Communist Party in the United States.

The first televised debate between Democratic and Republican presidential nominees was between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in 1960.

Q: HOW SIGNIFICANT IS THE FIRST DEBATE?

A: "It depends entirely on what's said and whether one side scores, if not a knockout, then enough blows to count," said University of Virginia Center for Politics Director Larry J. Sabato. "The first debate will probably have a very substantial audience, in the tens of millions, but let's remember: Some debates have mattered, but most debates haven't."

Q: WHAT DOES MITT ROMNEY NEED TO ACCOMPLISH IN THE FIRST DEBATE?

A: "Romney's job is obviously a lot tougher because he's behind," Sabato said. "He's got to do a number of things in the debates that he really should have done during the summer or at the convention, including defining who he is, what he stands for and what he'll do, and that's in addition to making the case against President Obama."

Q: WHAT DOES OBAMA NEED TO ACCOMPLISH IN THE FIRST DEBATE?

A: "Obama has an easier job, but he can't take anything for granted," Sabato said. "He has to make the case for not just his first term but what he'd do in a second, which for most people is a giant question mark."

Q: WHAT DOES ROMNEY NEED TO AVOID DOING OR SAYING?

A: "He needs to avoid being too defensive," said Arnold Weiner, of Memphis, Tenn., who was a Republican National Convention delegate in Tampa, Fla., in August. "I think, like Reagan, he needs to talk about positive, conservative aspects of 'peace through strength' and how free enterprise can help everybody ... to win over the college-educated swing voters in the suburbs."

Q: WHAT DOES OBAMA NEED TO AVOID DOING OR SAYING?

A: "Because I'm a peace activist, I think his most — I won't say delicate — but his most vulnerable position is on drones, and the use of drones, and the fact that the war in Afghanistan isn't ending until 2014," said Kelly Jacobs, of Hernando, Miss., a delegate to the Democratic National Convention last month in Charlotte, N.C. "That's the area I would give the president the most criticism in, and, if Mitt Romney goes there, I hope he has some really good answers."

Q: WHAT GAFFES, ZINGERS OR QUESTIONABLE ASSERTIONS ARE PAST DEBATES BEST KNOWN FOR?

A: President Gerald Ford told Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter and

In 1984, Ronald Reagan, 73, said of his Democratic opponent, Walter Mondale, 56: "I am not going to exploit, for political purposes, my opponent's youth and inexperience."

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen responded in 1988 to Republican Dan Quayle's comparison of himself with John F. Kennedy, saying: "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

Q: WHEN AND WHERE WILL THE OTHER DEBATES TAKE PLACE, AND WHAT ISSUES WILL THEY FOCUS ON?

A: After Denver, there will be a vice presidential debate Oct. 11 at Centre College in Danville, Ky. The second presidential debate, with a town hall format on Oct. 16 at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., will cover domestic and foreign policy questions submitted by undecided voters selected by the Gallup polling organization. The third debate will be Oct. 22 at Lynn University in Boca Raton, Fla., and will focus on foreign policy.

Americans seek answers to some tough questions

■ Economy, Afghanistan and education on people's minds

By Bartholomew Sullivan
Scripps Howard News Service

The public has a lot of questions for Barack Obama and Mitt Romney as the first debate tonight in Denver approaches.

From coast to coast, Americans told Scripps television stations and newspapers what they most would like the candidates to address as they joust over domestic issues.

Kellee Adams, 41, of Klamath Falls, Ore., wants to know if either candidate would be willing to "stand alongside your soldiers on the front line of war ... with them in the trenches." Others want to ask what the contenders would do about climate change, the cost of higher education, Iran, illegal immigration, gas prices, getting out of Afghanistan and ending partisan gridlock.

Several readers responding to Scripps' requests for debate questions want specific and credible answers to how either candidate would create more jobs in a still-struggling economy.

"I don't want a politician's answer. I don't want you to go around Jack's barn; just give me a straight answer," demanded Kathryn Pochoy, 69, of Redding, Calif.

Some still question Obama's birth certificate and Romney's Mormonism, but others, frustrated at a dysfunctional Washington, would ask the candidates if they'd endorse specific policies.

"To solve our massive unemployment problems and put so many skilled and trained people back to work, would you push for a new form of (Depression-era Works Progress Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps) and (the 1973 Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) job opportunities?" asked Mike Evans, of Anderson, Calif.

Self-described independent voter and Akron, Ohio, restaurant owner Scott Malensek, 43, had a more immediate concern and posted his question on the WEWS-TV Facebook page in Cleveland. He wants the candidates to say how they'll address the "fiscal cliff" of tax hikes and automatic spending cuts looming in January and avoid another Great Depression.

Pamela A. McIlhargy posted her question to Detroit TV station WXYZ's Facebook page: "What will you do to help the drought-stricken states (the wheat, corn and food belts of the U.S.)...?"

Some prospective questions appeared aimed directly at each candidate's perceived vulnerabilities. Mary Keck, of Houston, wants to know why Romney bumped up his income tax rate from 9 percent to 14 percent by not claiming the entire value of his charitable deductions last year.

"Is this an example of the integrity we can expect?" Keck asked.

Darin Bergstrom, 43, of Redding, wants Obama reminded of his prediction that, if he didn't end the financial crisis in three years, his presidency would be "a one-term proposition."

"Why are you running again?" Bergstrom asked.

Sports management professor Robin L. Hardin, of Knoxville, Tenn., 42, wants to test whether the candidates have feet of clay and "to see how tuned (in) they are with America and the middle class: How much for a loaf of bread? How much for a gallon of milk? ... What was the last movie that you saw?"

Walter Monk wrote on Tampa, Fla.'s WFTS-TV Facebook page that he wants both candidates asked if they're concerned about "the rising number of dogs shot by the police."

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Workers prepare the set Tuesday for the presidential debate at the Magness Arena on the campus of the University of Denver. President Barack Obama and Republican presidential candidate and former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney will hold their first debate Wednesday.

Debates bring out best and worst in candidates

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — They spend hours mastering policy, learning to lean on the podium just so, perfecting the best way to label their opponents as liars without whining.

But presidential candidates and their running mates often find that campaign debates turn on unplanned zingers, gaffes or gestures that speak volumes.

A look back at some of the best and worst exchanges from presidential debates.

REAGAN: "I am not going to exploit, for political purposes, my opponent's youth and inexperience."

When Reagan won the White House in 1980, he was 69 and the oldest man elected to the office. During his successful 1984 re-election campaign, he faced questions about his age in a contest against 56-year-old Walter Mondale, the former vice president.

McCain: "That one."

"By the way, my friends, I know you grow a little weary with this back-and-forth. It was an energy bill on the floor of the Senate loaded down with goodies, billions for the oil companies, and it was sponsored by (President George W. Bush) and (Vice President Dick) Cheney. You know who voted for it? You might never know," McCain said, gesturing to his rival.

"That one."

BODY LANGUAGE: Watches, sighs and eye rolls

with then-Texas Gov. George W. Bush with a series of loud, overwrought sighs.

The vice president rolled his eyes, a move that his staff — and America — instantly recognized as problematic. Before the next debate, Gore's aides made him watch a "Saturday Night Live" skit mocking his performance.

Course correction was not enough. Gore lost to Bush.

Shootings expose cracks in mental health care

By Carla K. Johnson and Patrick Condon
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Andrew Engeldinger's parents pushed him for two years to seek treatment for what they suspected was mental illness, but even though he became increasingly paranoid and experienced delusions, there was nothing more they could do.

Minnesota law doesn't allow people to be forced into treatment without proof that they are a threat to themselves or others. Engeldinger's parents were horrified last week, when their 36-year-old son went on a workplace shooting spree that led to the deaths of a Minneapolis sign company's owner, several of his employees and a UPS driver. Engeldinger then killed himself.

"They wanted him to get treatment. They wanted him to get help," said Sue Abderholden, the executive director of the Minnesota chapter of the National Alliance on Mental Illness, who has acted as a family spokeswoman. She added: "You're not going to convince someone they're ill if they don't want to believe it."

This is a problem faced by many friends and relatives of people suffering from mental illness, along with the police officers and health care providers to whom they turn for help. While a small number of people with mental illness commit acts of violence, the difficulty of securing treatment and ensuring it is successful — and the catastrophic consequences of failure — are common threads that often link such outbursts.

"These are not random acts of violence," said Dr. E. Fuller Torrey, a psychiatrist at the nonprofit Stanley Medical Research Institute in Maryland. "It is my personal belief that these episodes will increase in number and severity and will continue until we figure out what to do about it."

Engeldinger was never formally diagnosed with a mental illness, but his family was concerned enough by their son's behavior, which included claims that he was being followed, to enroll in a free, 12-week course for loved ones of people with mental illness before he cut off contact in late 2010.

His willful estrangement kept his parents from the basement of his small bungalow, where police said he stockpiled 10,000 rounds of ammunition and a second gun on top of the 9mm Glock semi-automatic pistol he used in Thursday's shooting. Without evidence that he was a threat to himself or others, they were unable to force him into treatment under Minnesota law.

Law professor Elyn Saks poses for a photo at the University of Southern California campus in Los Angeles. Saks, who suffers from schizophrenia, wrote a memoir, "The Center Cannot Hold: My Journey Through Madness," and was a recipient of a MacArthur Foundation "genius grant," for her contributions to mental health law.

A successful patients' rights movement in the 1970s made it difficult — and illegal in some states — to force a person into treatment unless he or she was homicidal or suicidal. Dr. Darold Treffert, a Wisconsin psychiatrist, coined the phrase "dying with their rights on" in 1974, after collecting stories of people who didn't qualify for involuntary commitment and later killed themselves.

In the years since, 41 states have added "need for treatment" standards to their laws that allow more individuals to be placed into court-ordered treatment programs. Minnesota is not among them.

"The pendulum is slowly returning to a reasonable balance," Treffert said. "I have comforted myself on this long mission with the realization that some things can be learned and can't be taught. We do seem to be learning slowly from tragedies."

A sly suggestion from a police officer led Kevin Earley's father to lie and say the young man was violent so that he would get treatment. Earley, then 23, was arrested after breaking into someone else's house to take a bubble bath.

"He said, 'Unless you tell them your son threatened to kill you, they won't admit him and we'll take him to jail, and you don't want that,'" said Pete Earley, an author in Fairfax, Va., who has written about his son's experience in the mental health care system.

Kevin Earley was seeing secret messages all around him, but his father never heard his clearly psychotic son threaten himself or others.

"I went in and I lied. And that got him into the hospital," Pete Earley said.

But just getting patients diagnosed or enrolled in treatment often isn't enough. Virginia Tech gunman Seung-Hui Cho was ordered into outpatient treatment before he killed 32 people in 2007.

This summer, prosecutors say, James Holmes killed 12 people at a midnight premiere of a new Batman movie in Colorado. His attorneys say he had an undisclosed mental illness, and his psychiatrist tried to report him to a campus behavioral and security committee.

Experts say it can take years before patients agree to stick with a prescribed treatment. Elyn Saks, a law professor at the University of Southern California, has schizophrenia and, without medication, starts to believe she can kill hundreds of thousands of people with her thoughts. Until the mid-1990s, when she was in her 40s, Saks tried periodically to skip her drugs.

"I felt so ashamed," said Saks, a MacArthur Foundation "genius grant" winner for her contributions to mental health law. "It's an internalized stigma. I wanted to be whole, I wanted to be well. Each time I tried to get off medication, I did it with great gusto and failed miserably." Now, she takes her pills. "Frankly, I'm sorry I wasn't smarter sooner."

Earley initially didn't stick with treatment after his father lied to get him into a hospital. He became violent — he was shot with a Taser by a police officer at one point — and was hospitalized five times before he realized he couldn't live without his medication.

Kevin Earley, 33, stands next to the medicine cabinet which has an old photo taped to it, in the bathroom of his Vienna, Va., apartment that he shares with a roommate. "It reminds me to take my medicine every day and reminds me of where I have been and what I have been through," said Earley.

BEST BETS

7:30 p.m. on 25 The Neighbors

After talking Larry and Jackie (Simon Templeman, Toks Olagundoye) into sending their children to school, Debbie and Marty (Jami Gertz, Lenny Venito) take them shopping for school clothes. It's their first time outside Hidden Hills, and it could get interesting. Jackie and Debbie are suspicious of each other's intentions in the new episode "Journey to the Center of the Mall."

7:30 p.m. on 14 Guys With Kids

Marny and Gary (Tempestt Bledsoe, Anthony Anderson) have four sons, but Marny still yearns for a little girl, so she tries to talk her husband into trying again. Sheila (Erinn Hayes) plans a child CPR class and proceeds to sign everyone up for it in the new episode "Marny Wants a Girl." Zach Cregger, Jamie-Lynn Sigler and Jesse Bradford also star.

8 p.m. on 19 Supernatural

In the season premiere, Dean (Jensen Ackles) is out of Purgatory and goes to see Sam (Jared Padalecki), who is glad to see his brother but finds it difficult to leave his new life. The Winchester's go in search of Kevin (Osric Chau), who has escaped from the clutches of Crowley (Mark Sheppard) but has disturbing news about what his former captor wants, in "We Need to Talk About Kevin."

8 p.m. on 935 Presidential Debate

Mitt Romney and Barack Obama engage in their first presidential debate, airing on multiple networks, with domestic policy the primary focus. PBS "NewsHour" executive editor Jim Lehrer moderates at the University of Denver in Colorado.

8 p.m. on 6N Restaurant: Impossible

Linda was an employee at the Whistle Stop in Hot Springs, Ark., when the owners announced they were closing it. She bought the restaurant from them to keep it open, but it's been a struggle. Enter Robert Irvine to restore the dining room, give the kitchen a good cleaning and train the staff in the new episode "Whistle Stop."

8 p.m. on NB Abandoned

This new episode brings the guys to the Scranton Lace Factory in Pennsylvania, which was founded in 1897 and operated for more than 100 years before closing in 2002. They pick up a check protector, a pair of doors and an old tampon dispenser, then the discovery of a bowling shoe and score sheet leads them to a four-lane bowling alley full of vintage balls and pins.

9 p.m. on 6S Paranormal Witness

This special 90-minute episode "The Abduction" brings together the key people involved in the most famous alleged alien abduction case in history. It's the story of the reported 1975 abduction and reappearance of Arizona logger Travis Walton, whose five-day experience inspired the film "Fire in the Sky." Thirty-seven years later, Walton and the six loggers who lived through the events and ensuing investigation still stand by their story.

9 p.m. on 6 Cajun Pawn Stars

The family calls in an expert to verify the authenticity of Ted Williams' signature on a baseball bat. Jimmie tries to make a deal for a mourning armband worn to Abraham Lincoln's funeral. Johnnie and Walt check out a gold-plated M16 commemorating the capture of Saddam Hussein in the new episode "Batter Up."

9 p.m. on 6 Life After Top Chef

This new reality series follows former "Top Chef" contestants Richard Blais in Atlanta, Jen Carroll in Philadelphia, Spike Mendelsohn in Washington, D.C., and Fabio Viviani in Los Angeles as they reach milestones in their personal lives and culinary careers — from opening their own restaurants to expanding franchises and establishing themselves as leaders in the food world.

Robert Irvine

9:30 p.m. on 44.2 NUMB3RS

Who says only the "Law & Order" shows get to rip their stories from the headlines? In "Nine Wives," Don (Rob Morrow) and his fellow agents try to catch the leader of a polygamous sect who's suspected in the brutal beating of a teenage girl. A chat left at the last place he was known to be may help them determine his whereabouts ... if Charlie and Amita (David Krumholtz, Navi Rawat) can decipher it. Teri Polo guest stars.

9:30 p.m. on 11 The Nanny

Fran must intervene when an exasperated Maxwell (Charles Shaughnessy) threatens to send Brighton (Benjamin Salisbury) to military school after he receives a failing science grade in "The Bird's Nest." Lauren Lane, Daniel Davis, Nicholle Tom and Madeline Zima also star.

Jen Carroll

10 p.m. on 7 Rules of Engagement

Getting romantically involved with a co-worker can be tricky, and so can making a romantic partner into a colleague. Most people know that, but it takes Adam and Jennifer (Oliver Hudson, Bianca Kajlich) a little longer to figure out when she starts freelancing for his company, and friction ensues. The gift of a fertility idol appears to make a difference in Jeff's (Patrick Warburton) libido in "Jen at Work."

On Oct. 3, 1962, astronaut Wally Schirra became the fifth American to fly in space as he blasted off from Cape Canaveral aboard the Sigma 7 on a 9-hour flight.

On this date:

In 1789, President George Washington declared Nov. 26, 1789, a day of Thanksgiving to express gratitude for the creation of the United States of America.

In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed the last Thursday in November Thanksgiving Day.

In 1951, the New York Giants captured the National League pennant by a score of 5-4 as Bobby Thomson hit a three-run homer off the Brooklyn Dodgers' Ralph Branca in the "shot heard 'round the world."

In 1967, folk singer-songwriter Woody Guthrie died at age 55.

In 1992, Barack Obama married Michelle Robinson at the Trinity United Church of Christ in Chicago.

In 2008, O.J. Simpson was found guilty of robbing two sports-memorabilia dealers at gunpoint in a Las Vegas hotel room. (Simpson was later sentenced to nine to 33 years in prison.)

Ten years ago: Hurricane Lili gave Louisiana's coast a 100-mile-an-hour battering. Producer-director Bruce Paltrow, 58, died in Rome, Italy.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush quietly vetoed expansion of a children's health insurance program.

One year ago: Arthur C. Nielsen Jr., 92, who'd led the famous TV ratings company, died in Winnetka, Ill.
